

Meyer Outlines Plan to Finance Stock Industry

Question Dependent on Good Paper That Can Be Rediscouted, Head of War Corporation Says.

Denver, Aug. 26.—Eugene Meyer, jr., of Washington, chairman of the war finance corporation, in an address before the American National Livestock association in midday session here, outlined his proposals for the permanent financing of the livestock industry. He promised all the aid within his power and suggested that a special committee of the association take up the subject with a view to adequately financing the industry.

Mr. Meyer explained that the war finance corporation was only a temporary organization and that its purpose was simply to meet an emergency. No similar organization of permanent status, he said, could hope to receive the cooperation and efforts of the men who had volunteered their services, as other business and affairs would not permit them to devote so much of their time to the corporation.

Dependent on Good Paper.
"The whole question of livestock financing is dependent upon good paper, that can be rediscouted," said Mr. Meyer. "The activities of the war finance corporation and the condition of the livestock industry has shown the necessity of some plan that will take care of cattle from the breeding time to their maturity. There have been a number of plans proposed. I believe that an amendment to the federal reserve act with a few minor changes will make it possible to devise a plan whereby this permanent financing may be accomplished."

The Capper bill in the senate and the McCadden bill in the house are two measures aimed at a solution of the problem. These bills propose cattle loan companies that could issue securities on cattle and would result in bringing out more money for the industry.

Congress has also a plan for continuing the war finance corporation under another designation, but I do not believe that this is practicable for a permanent relief. If we can finance the industry through regular channels, it will be not only practicable, but far more satisfactory.

Inspection Necessary.
"To get an adequate capital for financing the livestock industry you must convince capital that the industry is sound; you must give confidence to the industry and this association can give this confidence. There must be proper supervision of shipments and, above all, there must be adequate inspection."

The war finance corporation has loaned a total of $85,000,000, of which $30,000,000 was through banks and $55,000,000 through cattle loan companies, Mr. Meyer said. Most of these loan companies, he added, are new companies.
"I believe that an amendment to the national banking act can be obtained that would permit a national bank to subscribe for stock in a cattle loan company," he continued. "Under the Edge act a national bank can subscribe for stock in an institution financing imports."

National Guard Notes

The boys of Company L are proud of the record made by Mortimer A. Morrison, 49 out of a possible 50 with the automatic rifle on the 500-yard range. Morrison, who is an employe of the Beaton Drug company, Omaha, enlisted but a week before the encampment. His first nine shots were "bull's eyes," while the 10th dropped into the No. 4 circle.

A special guard detail has been sent after an A. W. O. L. prisoner apprehended at Fairmont. This makes the 13th case to come before the special court-martial board during the encampment. Surely an unlucky number for some of the boys.

Scarcely will the guardsmen get off the rifle range when it will be occupied by regulars from Fort Crook and Fort Omaha. One battalion, consisting of three companies from Fort Crook and two from Fort Omaha will arrive Monday forenoon for three weeks' firing practice. They will camp on the government-owned land adjoining the range instead of the site of the guard encampment. Major Pruym, who has been one of the regular army men assigned to instruct the officer trainees in terrain problems the past two weeks, will remain here and be in charge of the troops at the range.

Company K claims the record for camp enrollment. A few days ago a three-week Kemper Military academy graduate from Omaha visited the camp and the following day came back and signed up with the crack Omaha outfit. This gives K four former Kemper students in its enlisted personnel.

"The health of the troops at Camp Barry is the best that can be found in a gathering of 1,400 men anywhere," says Maj. P. H. Bartholomew, camp surgeon. "Very few cases requiring treatment have been reported at the camp infirmary and these have been of so slight a nature as not to be serious."

Lieut. J. M. Turbyfill of Company G, Hastings, has been assigned as assistant to the trial judge advocate, Maj. John Laylor, also of Hastings.

Under the many changes taking place in the organization program being carried out, it is said that the address would scarcely recognize his army name. One of the news-out innovations is the official commencing of the title "Mr." upon one man in the regiment. This title was conferred on George A. McCall, band leader of York, under date of July 15, and he now ranks the same as a second lieutenant, while enjoying the distinction of his newly created title.

The men of Company I, Lincoln, have dressed up the ground in front of their kitchen with a border of crushed rock and the lettering

Company I, 154th Infantry, Lincoln, in the center, so it resembles the familiar railroad station grounds.

Some craphooters from Omaha visited the camp Tuesday night intending to trim up the boys, but instead got trimmed themselves. They then started to get rough, but were taken into tow by the military guard and turned over to the city authorities, who held them in jail a few hours and then turned them loose with instructions to get out of town. A stranger who approached the camp Thursday night attempting to sell hootch was also turned over to the civil authorities, who relieved him of a $100 fine.

Clarence Brandrup, bugler of Company F, Harrington, has been elected regimental headquarters as the best bugler in the camp. The Omaha Y. M. C. A. quartet failed to get down Thursday night as announced, through failure of one of their members to return from a trip in the east as expected. The men entertained themselves with a program of camp music, Friday night at the Regimental Headquarters company of Omaha set up its large radio outfit, with seven stages of amplification, at the recreation tent for a demonstration, receiving The Omaha Bee's broadcasts, as has been done every night since coming to camp.

Supply Sergeant George S. Heiner, Company L, Omaha, is another man who has seen long service with the National guard. He holds 28 years' continuous enlistment, part of the time as a commissioned officer, and the enlistment stripes on his coat have grown in number until they would make even a veteran conductor green with envy.

Mess Sergeant Harry Dobbins of Company L was a mess sergeant with the headquarters company cavalry, Iowa National guard, at the encampment at Des Moines last year. He is an old timer at the game and with Jack Cole, company cook, has been feeding the men on army rations in a manner that has made everyone a booster for the chow. In the morning tour of kitchen inspection there has never been rated below "very clean" and most of the time "excellent."
