

Voters to Sunset State to Nominate Candidates Today

Principal Interest Centers in California Primary Centers Between Johnson and Moore.

San Francisco, Aug. 28.—Candidates will be nominated Tuesday in California's primary election for offices ranging from United States senator to justice of the peace.

Principal interest centers in the contest between Senator Hiram W. Johnson and C. C. Moore, both of San Francisco, for the republican nomination for United States senator.

The democratic socialist and prohibition parties have named on the senatorial ballot W. J. Pearson, Los Angeles; Lydon Sinclair, Pasadena; and H. Clay Needham, Newhall, respectively, and these three will contest in the November finals with the winner of the republican nomination.

Governor William D. Stephens is a candidate to succeed himself as the republican nominee, but he has opposition within his party from State Treasurer Friend W. Richardson. The democrats will make a choice of nominees for governor between Thomas Lee Woolwine, district attorney of Los Angeles county and Mattison F. Jones, a Los Angeles attorney.

There will also be nominated candidates for lieutenant governor, treasurer, controller and various other state offices, partisan and nonpartisan. A complete congressional and state legislative ticket also will be selected.

In five of the states' 11 congressional districts, there will be no contests because incumbent representatives are unopposed for the republican and democratic nominations. In the First, Second, Third, Ninth and Tenth districts the incumbents all have fights on their hands for both party nominations.

Amundsen Reported 100 Miles From Point Barrow

Nome, Alaska, Aug. 28.—(By A. P.)—Capt. Roald Amundsen, who last month transferred to the schooner Holmestad on the Maud on his Arctic expedition, is now at Wainwright, 100 miles southwest of Point Barrow, according to a message from Capt. S. C. Cochran of the coast guard cutter Bear.

Capt. Cochran's message was sent through the coast guard station at Point Barrow to Capt. Thomas A. Ross here.

Capt. Cochran said that Lieut. Oskar Omdal, aviator and a moving picture photographer, were with Amundsen and that the Amundsen party intended to land at Wainwright.

It is thought here that Capt. Amundsen and his party have transferred to the Bear from the Holmestad, due to heavy ice, and that they may be planning to start at Wainwright the airplane flight which the explorer planned over the Arctic circle.

Demo. Woman Candidate Opposed to All the "—eers" Madison, Wis., Aug. 28.—"I am opposed to tax revision for the buccaneers, to a tariff for the profiteers, and to senate seats for the auctioneers."

With this statement Miss Martha Riley, democratic candidate for congress from the Third congressional district, summed up her platform, announced today.

Miss Riley, the only woman aspirant from Wisconsin for a seat in the lower house of congress, says that she favors a "people's bloc" in the national congress, instead of a "millionaire's bloc."

French Creator Visiting New York, Gives "Low Down" on Latest Styles

Paul Poiret Decries Ankle Length Skirts, With High Boots to Match Gowns, Proper Thing—Does Not Listen When Women Protest.

New York, Aug. 28.—Ankle length skirts. Draping of the gown to clothe the body without hiding its beautiful lines. High boots in colors to match gowns.

These are the last word in fashions of Paris, according to Paul Poiret of Paris, visiting New York for the first time since 1913.

M. Poiret smiled indulgently over all the fuss that has been made against long skirts and waved it aside with a graceful sweep of his artistic hand.

"There are always women who resist the fashion," he said, "but in the end they always follow it. They are usually about three years behind and so really out of fashion all the time."

"Don't Listen." "As for me, I don't listen. When I began twenty years ago with the narrow skirt there was a furor of opposition. Women said it gave them no room to move. When I started the full skirt it was the same; they objected to the fullness."

"It is not necessary to pay much attention to what women say. They are always dominated by a spirit of contrariness."

"The man who is known and followed by millions of women throughout the world as creator of their ideas for dress and who cares so little what they themselves think they are in revolt as original as many of the daring ideas he has developed. Of medium height and stocky build, his movements might be heavy, but they are not. There is the grace of the dancer in his step and the ease of an actor in his every pose. His iron grey hair is smoothed back pompadour above a face nearly covered with short, bristly beard. His large, blue eyes are filled with keen understanding and interest and twinkle ever so brightly as if with secret merriment at the gaps in his fashion's cause.

Own Costume Knockout. As an example of dress for the American man M. Poiret's costume of this morning would be a knockout. Over conventional enough grey trousers, shirt, collar and tie he wore a light tan lounging jacket of nearly knee length with high roll collar, unbuttoned at the throat. In the pocket on the upper left breast was a blue and brown striped silk kerchief. M. Poiret was shod with crimson boots, surmounted by tan spats.

"I was surprised and shocked," he said in telling of an hour's inspection of New York crowds at Times Square, "to see so many and so high short skirts. When I started the short skirt a terrific protest that it was immoral, came from America. Coming to this country, reputed to be so moral, I had not expected to find the exaggerated short skirt, but there it is at the same excessive degree of shortness which we had in Paris in 1917."

M. Poiret conceded that he had not been in America long enough to see what the leaders of fashion were wearing. But skirts must be long now, he said, and would eventually reach the ground. This, he said, would come by degrees, ankle length being proper at this stage of the reversion from short skirts.

load of other essential traffic developing up it, this machinery would be unable to move coal in a surplus great enough to prevent opportunity for profiteering in the industry. Price regulation, he maintained, would be necessary and could be brought about in a moderate form by the enactment of the legislation proposed.

Government to Delay Seizure of Industries

The Interstate Commerce commission broader powers over priority of shipments. In the house, the bill will be taken up Tuesday under a rule providing for six hours of debate.

Committee Takes Action. In the senate, committee action was taken after only a short discussion and the members reserving the right to debate the measure at length on the senate floor. The house committee did not vote its approval until it had heard arguments for the measure by Secretary Hoover and Interstate Commerce Commissioner Atchison, and some sharp criticism of its price-fixing potentialities from representatives of both employers and labor in the industry.

Notwithstanding the opposition indicated President Harding was informed late in the day by Republican Leader Mondell that the distribution measure would be brought into the house Tuesday and passed before Wednesday night. No such quick action was in prospect in the senate, where the legislative situation was more complicated, but the leaders predicted that there would be favorable action without much delay. Several cabinet members, senators and other officials, including Secretary Hoover, Attorney General Daugherty and Chairman Cummins of the senate interstate commerce committee, accompanied President Harding on the Mayflower trip and are understood to have taken part in a prolonged round-table discussion of administration policies.

Opinion Divided. It was said that opinion among the chief executive's advisers was divided on the subject of government operation in a way that in the end Mr. Harding indicated he would exert no pressure for legislation authorizing such a step.

As viewed by the Mayflower conferees, the coal strike situation, both anthracite and bituminous, appeared in a way that solved itself and insure increased production in the very near future, leaving the problem of moving the product to the consumer as the crux of the whole effort to restore industrial stability. It appeared that the opinion of the president's advisers that a great deal could be done in that direction under authority already or to be conferred by the distribution and priority legislation pending.

Despite the transportation difficulties, the increase in coal production has reached a point where the administration decided that the voluntary distribution organization, which has been functioning for the past four weeks, could be abandoned pending enactment of the distribution legislation before congress. Federal Fuel Distributor Spencer announced the disbandment of his voluntary committee by the end of the week and a discontinuance of super-priority orders for the movement of coal.

Special arrangements were being considered by the Interstate Commerce commission for handling the winter's fuel supply for the north-west section while coal movement directed heretofore by Mr. Spencer would be shipped under the existing priority-classifications of the commission.

Outlook Brighter. In the anthracite field reports were so reassuring that it was indicated an agreement to insure reopening of the mines was expected within a very short time.

Secretary Hoover, in appearing before the house committee, argued that some legal method of restraining exorbitant prices in coal would be necessary and declared they were contained in the measure under consideration. His views were supported by Commissioner Atchison. J. B. A. Murray, vice president of the National Coal association, representing operators producing about half of all the bituminous coal, declared the price control methods proposed were unwise and likely to be opposed by all the producers. He advocated provision of sufficient transportation facilities to guarantee a coal supply which of itself, he said, would break higher prices.

A debate before the committee ended when Commissioner Atchison was recalled for rebuttal and declared that while the coal-mining machinery of the United States has already been put at the service of the coal industry, and that now, with the shipper's strike and the load of other essential traffic developing up it, this machinery would be unable to move coal in a surplus great enough to prevent opportunity for profiteering in the industry. Price regulation, he maintained, would be necessary and could be brought about in a moderate form by the enactment of the legislation proposed.

Reclamation Plan Subject of Debate

sation for the veterans when his company had made "great profits" during the war.

Says Limit Reached. Senator Wadsworth was particularly scornful in his attack on the measure. He declared the bonus could be financed only through taxes now or later and that the American people had reached a limit in the burden they could bear.

Also he argued that the veterans themselves, their wives and their children would have to work but the harder in the years to come to pay back the money the former soldiers received, which, he contended, would be insufficient to afford any lasting benefits.

The New York senator argued that the measure could be properly termed an "adjusted compensation" bill, because it proposed to treat all men alike, no matter what their pay in war time and whether they needed assistance. Attacking the bank loan provision, he asserted that this was an invitation from the government to self-respecting men to borrow from the banks and then repudiate their notes, leaving to the government the payment of the sums borrowed.

Supports Reclamation Plan. In presenting his reclamation amendment, Senator McNary told the senate that it afforded an opportunity for congress to do "a great thing in empire building" by reclaiming arid lands in the west and swamp and cutover lands in the south and east. He argued also that it would give opportunity to veterans desiring to get back to the land to acquire homesteads with government aid and operate to maintain a much needed balance between the rural and urban population.

The reclamation plan received the support also of several senators from the west and south and was unopposed in the debate.

Fruit Rates Held Justified. Washington, Aug. 28.—Rates maintained by western railroads on sugars, canned fruits, vegetables and fresh and evaporated fruits from California and Utah to Nevada points were held justified today by the interstate commerce commission through five of the 11 commissioners dissented from the majority conclusion.

Rates on all the products named were attacked by the Nevada public service commission in a proceeding which asked for sharp reductions. Chairman McChord and Commissioners Campbell, Meyer, Eastman and Potter constituted the minority which held the rates should be graded downward.

Schmitt Loses Job for 30 Days for Hitting Gritz

Governor Suspends Auto Sleuth Short Period for Striking Garage Man With Flashlight.

Lincoln, Aug. 29.—(Special)—Governor McKelvie today suspended Earl Schmitt, jr., a deputy state sheriff, for 30 days following a fight between Schmitt and Luther Gritz, an Auburn garage man, near Plattsmouth more than a week ago.

The governor held that while he was not certain the assault made by Schmitt upon the garage man was not provoked by Gritz, that Schmitt was not warranted in striking Gritz with a flashlight.

Should Have Dressed Wounds. "I further feel," the governor said, "that after Schmitt discovered that Gritz was not an automobile thief and he could give a proper account of himself, he should have accompanied him to the nearest physician to have the wounds on Gritz's face dressed."

"However, I am convinced that Schmitt was properly engaged in the duties of his office when he stopped Gritz on the road for it is admitted by both parties that Gritz was using a dealer's number, contrary to the law, and had no license number on the front of his car."

Working Under Hazard. "Furthermore these discrepancies in the use of proper number plates and the conditions under which Schmitt observed Gritz and his companion would properly lead the deputy state sheriff to ascertain whether the car was the property of the one who was using it."

"In arriving at this conclusion, it has been necessary for me to take into account that the law enforcement officials always are working under a very great hazard, especially in the apprehension of those criminal types who engage in the theft of automobiles and the illegal sale of liquor, and this hazard is greatly increased when their work must be done during the late hours of the night."

Man Kills Fiancee Mistaken for Burglar

Texarkana, Ark., Aug. 28.—Mistaken by her fiance for a burglar attempting to enter the home which he was guarding in the absence of her sister's husband, Miss Callantha Atkins, 20, was shot and instantly killed by Ernest Barfield, 27.

Miss Atkins made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Taylor, the women being sisters. Taylor has been away from home for several weeks. The woman had been frightened by prowlers, so Barfield agreed to stand watch and took his station about 20 feet from the house.

During the night the women were awakened by an attempt by some one to enter the house. Miss Atkins left by a front window and went to apprise Barfield. She called his name as she neared the car in the dark. Barfield opened fire and the girl fell dead. They were to have been married in the early fall. Barfield is under the care of a physician, "unnerved from the shock," it is said.

Dead Girl's Picture Forms on Mirror

Sister, Sleeping in Room Where Woman's Body Had Rested, Terror-Stricken at Phenomenon, First of Kind on Record.

Shreveport, La., Aug. 28.—Tales of voodooism, magic and all of the ancient superstitions of the Louisiana negro were recalled last week by the negro population of Camp, La., when a photographic likeness of a mulatto girl, dead nine months, appeared on the mirror of the room in which she was placed after her death, according to a report of the phenomenon by C. M. Cunningham, former state senator.

The girl was a member of the Trichel family, mulattoes, who live about four miles from Camp. The body was laid in front of the mirror with a large bouquet clasped in the hands. Next day she was buried and the room has been occupied since that time by her sister. About a month ago it is related, the sister was thrown into violent agitation when she saw what appeared to be a likeness of her dead sister etched on the silvered surface of the mirror.

Gradually the likeness grew until from top to bottom of the mirror, a distance of 18 inches, the photograph is now complete. The girl appears with the bouquet clasped in the hands. The boards on which the body rested also are clearly visible. It is the accepted theory that the photograph is the result of an action of sunlight on the window panes and the silvered surface of the mirror, although so far as known here no similar case is on record.

The picture most closely resembles an old fashioned daguerrotype, and efforts to wash or rub it off the mirror, both from the front and back, have proved unsuccessful.

enjoyed the trip, the man said he had arrived at the conclusion that the money for good roads had been wisely spent. He further said that after hearing the candidates and meeting them personally he had fully decided that the republicans had an excellent ticket, and that therefore the primary system could not be so bad after all, and then when he had made some more personal investigation and found that the code system was really a budget system of government, which properly administered meant a reduction rather than an increase in taxes, the man went home completely satisfied, an enthusiastic supporter of the republican ticket.

Allied Delegates Are Deadlocked on Reparations

Commission Invites German Government to Give Final Facts in Request for Moratorium.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The reparations delegates were deadlocked in an extraordinary meeting yesterday over the guarantees to demand from Germany in return for a moratorium on cash payments.

To allow themselves several more days in which to agree, the commission has sent an unsought invitation to the German government to present its final case on the moratorium at the Hotel Astoria on Wednesday despite the fact that Sir John Bradbury and M. Maulever, the assistant French delegate, returned only Saturday from Berlin with the latest German memorandum.

The delegates lined up strictly according to tradition. Sir John Bradbury, warmly supported by the Italians, favored a moratorium without productive guarantees. Louis Du Bois demanded that control of the Ruhr mines and state forests be given France. M. Delacour, the Belgian delegate holding the balance of power, kept both the French and British delegates in doubt of how he would vote, though the French feel certain of Belgian support. His vote would give Germany a moratorium without guarantees, only a majority vote being necessary now. If he votes against it or does not vote, the moratorium will be refused.
