The Feminine Hiker Shows Hobo Tendencies, Says Y. W. C. A.

The lady hobo is with us. One of the least expected results of the so-called emancipation of women was that respectable young persons of the feminine gender would turn tramp, with all the shiftless instincts of the professional hand-out man, but such is the dire truth, as Mrs. Bessie Zickeloose, house secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will testify.

"The Y. W. C. A. is in the fullest sympathy with the athletic girl who seeks to develop health and muscle, and her well-being is one of our first concerns," said Mrs. Zickeloose, "but we do not encourage girl hikers who start without any particular objective to beat their way across the country. The craze only started in the past two years, and for a time the public was interested in these girls who felt a longing for adventure along the highroad and who seemed a little pluckier than other girls, and the Y. W. C. A., too, gave a hand gladly, but after the first 15 hard-luck stories the well of sympathy began to dry up. The spirit of dependence, that the world owes them a living, and that the public ought to be glad to help them along, isn't a particle more estimable in a girl than in a man or boy who does the same thing, and we have little respect for them."

The girl hiker is increasing as a species every month, according to the experience of the local Y. W. C. A. "Coast to coast" is their usual cry, and most of them are headed west.

"If they plan their trip before hand and carry enough money with them to pay for meals and lodging as they go it is quite different, and we are always glad to see them," explained the kindly-faced house secretary, "but we have only four beds in the house for the accommodation of transients, and one day last week when a hobbled-hair hiker in khaki breeches sailed in to the desk and asked in a grievous tone if she had a pay for a bed, the secretary was tempted to say, 'No, walk in; this is a boxcar.'"

"I never turn away a girl in need, but we try to keep girls self-respecting, and to teach them not to look for charity, but to pay for what they get," she continued. "The hiker have tried every kind of story as to why they have no money. Sometimes they have been robbed, sometimes they have left their pocketbooks in an automobile while accepting a lift, but more often they are expecting a check from home and can't understand why it isn't at the postoffice. They will pay for the morning, they say, and not they go, and we never see them again."

"Now and then we have one who offers to work, but most of them, if you show them a dollar, are just like the hobo who has seen a woman's pocketbook in the back of a woman's car. Mrs. Zickeloose added, tartly, "I don't know what is at the bot-

October Bride King Ak Plans a Week of Varied Sports

Miss Marion Hamilton, who is to become the bride of George Hamilton of Washington, D. C., early in October, has chosen as her maid of honor, the groom's sister, Miss Mary Hamilton, of Washington. Her other attendants will be Miss Erna Reed, Miss Eleanor Burdick, Miss Helen Hussie, all of Omaha, and Miss Nannie Hamilton of Washington, younger sister of the groom.

The wedding will take place at St. Cecelia's cathedral at 11 o'clock in the morning, October 4. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hamilton.

ever, will be a bit more daring, of course. White ones with attached soft collars are still as fashionable as they are comfortable and for variation the smart gentleman will shirt himself in champagne colored or cloud grey pussy willow tulle. This sounds like an encroachment on woman's territory, but, of course, that's fitting and proper after the shameless way women have taken to flappers.

Ties that will catch the eye during the fall of 1922 are full of holes; they call them Grenadine and even the knit ones are holier than last year, giving a "porosint" appearance.

To be hatted according to the latest dictates one must wear a shaggy model, either of polo cloth or fuzzy fur, and for variations there's a mixture with a discreet plaid effect. All have the crown pinched into a triangle.

The feet that conquer the world will have a stubbed toe, yes, even when you first buy them, deceitful things that start to be pointed and then get cut off before their crime.

Ross Party Lands.

The Anna Z. Ross party, which has been three months traveling in Europe and the continent, sailed Friday, August 23, from Liverpool on the Steamship Montreal. Canadian Pacific line, and land today at Montreal, Que.

Orpheum Players to Be Guests of Mrs. McGrew

Irene and Miriam Marmine, who are to appear at the Orpheum the week of October 15, in their dancing production which is one of the most famous of the season, will be the guests of their cousin, Mrs. C. F. McGrew, and will stop with her at the Blackstone. Their mother, Mrs. Harry Marmine, accompanies them.

Mrs. McGrew, who has recently returned from California, where she was with the girls in Los Angeles in June for the week of their performance there, is planning a number of informal affairs in their honor while they are here.

They have been in Omaha before, and will be remembered as being exceedingly lovely, and of a pronounced brunette type. They are not only talented in dancing, which by the way they taught themselves to do, but also exercise their artistic abilities in making and designing costumes. The Misses Marmine have never formally prepared for a theatrical career in a dramatic school. They attended a finishing school in Boston and then answered the call of the stage.

blank-looking, mechanical dancers who form a necessary part of the background. They are every one girls with individual personalities. Among their numbers is the Peacock Revue. Thousands of real peacock feathers—imported from China were used to construct the gigantic tails, which extend more than 15 feet and are raised or dropped by the swayers while on the stage.

Paganry is another attraction of the festival. On the evenings of September 18 and 19, 1,200 people will participate in "Coronado in Quivera," the Nebraska Historical pageant. The musical and dance numbers are elaborate and the personal consists of the best Omaha has to offer.

Ice skating is a sport of much interest to many people. Bobby McClain, champion ice skater in America, will present his act between scenes of the "Sonnies" show on the evenings of the 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. Mr. McClain has as his partner, a sister of the young skater who is Fred Stone's partner. Mr. McClain has his own plant for erecting his ice rink.

Swimming is another feature of interest. A sensational water circus will be held on the Midway. "The Australian Crawl with Yarnions" is the name of a complicated stunt performed by the pretty mermaids.

Bicycle riding is an act as performed by Tommy Mills, the comedy cyclist, who will perform both a day and evening in front of the grand stand.

Rev. Royal Midway, 30 clever little actors of the libretto variety will present an act on the Midway. The Hansen against McGill will be a wrestling match to be held at the field on Thursday evening, September 7.

Cupid Hides Behind a Tag and Jeers From a Fraternity Pin

Relativity and Sunburn Are Also Features in Gabby's Grist.

By GABBY DETAYLS.

"HE WHO GOT TAGGED." He should be the sign on the door of one young near-Benedict. Here's why:

A pretty girl stood on a street corner one hot day with a badge of a well known Omaha charity on her arm, and a bunch of tags in her hand. Her hat was so fetching and her smile so refreshing to gaze upon that a number of surly souls found themselves contributing before they realized it. And one young man, far from surly, but it understood, lingered longer than was absolutely necessary to linger, and pulled more change out of his pocket than the tag really demanded. It was his first meeting with the pretty girl, but it was far from his last. He bought a tag and won a smile for they are to be married this month. She is a graduate of an eastern school and has been active in church work. He is one of a family of several brothers and has been in a western city for the past five months.

With fall hand and the equinoctial procession of Tag days forming in line to the right Gabby feels that this bit of romance ought to encourage both the weary taggers and the bored tagged. Wondrous are the ways of Cupid!

hour, they have a different way still of giving directions.

"Take the main road for a mile and a half, turn down the valley for two showers and then take the path up the mountain for a shower."

In the east a policeman on the corner will point with his club. "Three blocks to your right, turn to the left for one and back to the right four blocks."

Unless you are ambidextrous you can follow his advice quite easily. But it is on our own, our native heath, right here in the middle west, that the points of the compass, north, south, east and west, come into their own. No palavering over lefts and rights, or hithers and thithers for us. Out here in the open spaces we have to know which side of the tree the moss grows on.

The rancher's wife had been house-cleaning and the family art gallery was going back on the walls with the assistance of the head of the house. With "The Stag at Eve" in her hand his better half climbed the stepladder and placed the picture hook on the molding.

"How's that?" she inquired.

Her spouse put his head on one side in the immemorial way which, it is generally assumed, is the correct way to look at all art.

"S all right, Minnie, but it'd be better if you'd move it just an inch south."

THE higher the fewer is an outworn comment. "The otterner the easier" is the motto which ought to adorn the northeast corner of the mirror in one Omaha maiden's room. At a western university, Gabby will not say which one, she had a young admirer of P. B. X. fraternity whose devotion lingered until the whole college talked of it, and it was not until her senior year that the affair was broken off. Promptly, and perhaps for consolation, a new fraternity pin took the place of the P. B. X. over the lady's heart and that remained in evidence for several months while her friends chattered busily over the rapid change.

This summer, however, the maiden apparently decided that fraternities do make a difference. If she didn't want the original P. B. X. man she did want a P. B. X. pin. Maybe it was better looking, and more prestige was certainly attached to it. So she went on a summer trip to a certain lake popular with Omahans, and some say that she registered a vow to herself before she left to come back wearing the pin she craved or none at all. And now after a month she has reappeared with a smile on her lips, a P. B. X. over her heart and a large diamond on her left fourth finger. Dear me, yes. He may not be the same man, and he does not come from the same university, but he joined the right fraternity.

WITH the wane of the summer season most persons are able to exhibit some sort of relaxation either unconsciously or by patient effort during the sunny days. It is the unmistakable badge of the returning vacationer. To have spent a two weeks' period in the country or at the seashore without obtaining a bronze complexion is to admit the failure of the outing, according to the general standard of estimating success in this line.

Acquisition of a tanned skin ordinarily has been considered a "white man's burden." But an Omaha "mammy" whose small grandson recently returned from a country, often known as Edith Wynne Matthisson, is familiar to Omaha audiences. They will give selections from their wide repertoire, which includes many of Mr. Kennedy's own plays.

Penelope Wheeler, an English woman, presents in costume Greek plays. She uses the translations of Professor Gilbert Murray and was for a number of years director of the London Greek Play company. Mrs. Wheeler, who appears before the Drama League December 5, is on her third Canadian-American tour.

The committee, headed by Mrs. Arthur Guioia, has not yet secured an artist for February, but in March Omaha will hear the celebrated artist, Ruth Draper, a young monologist, who has been a decided craze in New York for the past two winters. She is the highest-priced artist ever sponsored by the league and will appear at the Brandeis.

Says a critic in one New York paper: "Miss Draper can look pretty much as she wishes just by wishing. She can be a shriveled New England crone, an athletic young English girl, a wan little Scotch immigrant and a sturdy French peasant all in one evening, with no more change of costume than is involved in the shifting of a shawl, and with no brushwork whatever."

Drama League Plans Full Season

The Book of Job, Stuart Walker production, which will come to Omaha January 10, is the most elaborate and most widely talked of attraction to be presented by the Drama League this coming season. The play, which is taken almost word for word from the Old Testament, has won high praise from the critics for its dignity and intensity. It will be at the Brandeis theater, and a Drama League membership ticket will cost $1 towards the regular price of admission.

The opening number of an unusually promising Drama League season will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rand Kennedy, who are slated for November 14. Mr. Kennedy, often known as Edith Wynne Matthisson, is familiar to Omaha audiences. They will give selections from their wide repertoire, which includes many of Mr. Kennedy's own plays.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Wall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wall of Florence, and Eugene G. Kennebeck of Denver, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kennebeck of Omaha, will take place in Denver at the church of the Holy Ghost, on Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

The ceremony will take place at 8 o'clock in the morning and the attendants will be Miss Loretta Kennebeck and Paul Kennebeck, both of Omaha. Miss Wall will wear a black tulle dress with a quilted Russian blouse embroidered in blue and gold. Her hat is a leathered toque to match.

After a wedding trip through Estes Park the young couple will make their home in Denver, where Mr. Kennebeck is in business. Miss Wall and Miss Pennington left Saturday for Denver. The bride is a graduate of Sacred Heart High school and attended the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D. C. The groom attended Crighton university.

Society

When the Visiting Nurse association goes forth for its annual tag day Wednesday, September 13, Mrs. W. E. Rhoades, president of the association, will head the cohorts of workers. Mrs. Rhoades is widely and favorably known as an active worker on the boards of several Omaha organizations and is general chairman of the drive.

Mrs. W. W. Hoagland will again be in charge of the Dundee stations for the tag day this year, an office which she has capably filled on several former occasions.

Mrs. W. D. Hosford is chairman of the infant welfare committee. This committee manages the five infant welfare stations located at Twentieth and Grace, Mary Mann, Twenty-fifth and Decatur, South Side, city hall, Twentieth and Leavenworth and Christ Child center. At all these stations a staff of Omaha's most prominent child specialists generously donate their services.

Miss Gertrude Stout and Mrs. Milo Gates are two of the Junior League girls who faithfully appear every Tuesday morning at the Mary Mann infant welfare station at Twentieth and Grace, where they donate their services to the infant welfare department of the Visiting Nurse association. In this manner they are releasing the services of two paid nurses, for they assist the doctors in the work of the station. One hundred and forty-three babies are now being brought to this station weekly to be treated, and their mothers receive instruction in proper feeding and care.
