LONDON BY TWILIGHT. Not the London of Chapter 1 of the average English novel, which starts forth: "A dense fog swirled about the city streets." The atmosphere herein is as clear as the notes from "Big Ben," the father of countless alarm clocks, or this picture could not have been taken. Besides "Big Ben" and the bridge, we get the Houses of Parliament in silhouette.

This stork broke his leg in a fight with another stork in the Paris Zoo, so his owner supplied him with a wooden one, and he is just as lively as ever. Paul Thompson

"SO THIS IS NEW YORK?" Just arrived at Ellis Island—a picturesque pair of freckle-faced Russian youngsters, snapped as they stand guard over the family luggage in the temporary absence of their parents. Gallowa

QUALITY THAT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

THERE'S "something about them" that makes Paul Jones Garments the freely expressed preference of sensible mothers and well-gowned daughters.

And that "something" is quality—quality in the fabric, in the master craftsmanship and crisp, new flannels; quality in the refinements of design; quality in the excellence of tailoring.

It is a delightful experience to look over the Paul Jones styles at quality stores—or to think about them at leisure from the beautifully illustrated, full color 1922 Paul Jones Style Book which we would like to mail you. Address Dept F.
