Problems That Perplex.

Don't Hurry Her. Dear Miss Fairfax: Do you think a girl who is not in love with a young man can be so considerate and self-sacrificing as to accept him in order not to hurt his feelings? I have been in love with a young lady for the last year and a half and she has persistently evaded the question that I have asked of her.

Corns Go.

No. I would not give up school! You will be very sorry some day if you do. It was fine of you to study in the rest, if you haven't had the work. It may be that you can get the business more quickly than the routine one, and if you know a substitute in the teacher who may give you a chance to skip half a grade at the end of the semester, or at least let you take one or two courses in the advanced class. I would talk the situation over with the principal and see his advice.

Blue-jay to your druggist.

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch sends the pain instantly. Then the cure, looseness and cotton out. Made in a substance that is safe for the skin. (See drop does it) and it extra thin plaster. The action is the same.

My Marriage Problems

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

What Lillian Said That Compelled Smith to Yield. At Smith's shriek of fright, Lillian drew back the stiletto and nodded at me. "I thought so," she said. "It's poisoned, all right, and he knows exactly the death he'd die if he got a thrust with it. Oh, this is too easy!" She turned back to Smith, who, bound, yet struggling—was glaring at her as a cornered animal might have done.

"You've just one chance to escape this thing," she said, "and that is to tell me at once the antidote for the poison which is on this knife." Lillian's eyes flashed a gleam of cunning. "Will you let me go free if I tell you?" Lillian laughed grimly. "Listen to him, Madge," she said. "Isn't he the clever little bargain hunter, though? No, my gilded friend," she turned on him fiercely. "I will not let you go free. The only girl I will promise you is that you will not feel the kiss of this if you give me the correct antidote. So spill it quick, Madge, you'll have to remember it. I have no pencil here."

Why Castoria?

YEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupefy the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA. Have You Tried It? Everybody has read the above headline; how many believe it? Have you a little one in the home, and has that dear little mite when its stomach was not just right felt the comforts that come with the use of Fletcher's Castoria? You have heard the cry of pain. Have you heard them cry for Fletcher's Castoria? Try it. Just help baby out of its trouble tomorrow with a taste of Castoria. Watch the difference in the tone of the cry, the look in the eye, the wiggle in the tiny fingers. The transformation is complete—from pain to pleasure. Try it. You'll find a wonderful lot of information about baby in the booklet that is wrapped around every bottle of Fletcher's Castoria. GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES FURTHER TALES OF JIMMY RABBIT BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XIII. What Grew in Farmer Green's Garden. Along in the spring Uncle Jerry Chuck kept close watch of all that went on down in Farmer Green's vegetable garden. He always tried to find out what Farmer Green intended to plant. As Uncle Jerry Chuck used to remark, it was pleasant to know that people were working for you and that there was a good time coming.

One of Uncle Jerry's favorite complaints was that he couldn't reach fast enough on his way down from the pasture where he lived, to reach the garden ahead of Jimmy Rabbit. Every evening, throughout the summer, Uncle Jerry found Jimmy Rabbit dining on lettuce, green peas, cabbages or turnips. It always spoiled Uncle Jerry's pleasure to see Jimmy Rabbit sharing the good food; but it never spoiled Uncle Jerry's appetite. In the spring Uncle Jerry could hardly wait for summer to come, with its sweet, juicy crops. In the spring he was very polite to Jimmy Rabbit, because he always knew a good deal about Farmer Green's plans.

"What's Farmer Green going to plant this spring?" Uncle Jerry Chuck asked Jimmy Rabbit one day in May. "I hear," said Jimmy Rabbit, "that he has already planted First and Best, Little Marvel, and Champion."

"Huh!" Uncle Jerry grunted. "I never heard of those vegetables. They can't be much good. What else is he going to raise this year?" "Well, Jimmy replied, "there's going to be a short row of early Curled, another of May King plenty of Prize Head, and two long rows of Salamander."

"Fiddlesticks!" cried Uncle Jerry, frowning. "These are no good, I'm sure. I never ate any such fodder. Isn't Farmer Green going to raise anything tasty this season?" "I heard him tell the hired man that he had bought seed for New Wonder, Roundhead, and Mammoth Red," said Jimmy Rabbit with a sly smile.

"My goodness!" Uncle Jerry Chuck explained. "Has Farmer Green gone crazy? Why does he bother with such rubbish? He won't have any room left in his garden for green peas and lettuce and cabbage. I certainly do hope he's leaving a place for beets for there's no better eating."

summer—will you, Uncle Jerry?" "No!" said Uncle Jerry dolefully. "And, if I were only younger, I'd move on down the valley to somebody else's farm, where the folks like plain, old-fashioned food and none of these newfangled, fancy dishes. Of course," he added, "there'll be plenty of clover. And I'll worry through the summer on that. But a bit of something different now and then does wonders for an appetite as poor as mine."

"My goodness!" Uncle Jerry Chuck explained. "Has Farmer Green gone crazy? Why does he bother with such rubbish? He won't have any room left in his garden for green peas and lettuce and cabbage. I certainly do hope he's leaving a place for beets for there's no better eating."

Well, spring turned into summer. Farmer Green's garden had never looked better. Jimmy Rabbit visited it daily and often chuckled as he thought of Uncle Jerry Chuck eating clover week after week.

"At last, when the summer was half gone, Jimmy stopped to talk with the old fellow up in the pasture. "What's that red stain around your mouth?" Uncle Jerry asked him suddenly. "It's exactly the color of beets."

"Er—maybe it is a beet stain," Jimmy Rabbit stammered. "What?" cried Uncle Jerry. "Did Farmer Green grow beets, after all?" "He has a fine crop this summer," Jimmy admitted. "My goodness!" Uncle Jerry gasped. "Of course he didn't sow lettuce, or green peas, or cabbage!" "Yes, he did," Uncle Jerry Chuck flew into a rage. "And you never told me!" he squalled.

"Garden me," said Jimmy Rabbit. "I told you everything. Last spring I told you exactly what kinds of peas and lettuce and cabbage and beets Farmer Green intended to raise. And you said you didn't care for such rubbish."

"That's a beet. What is it?" "It's a beet," Jimmy explained. "And so is Crimson Globe, Little Marvel and First and Best are green peas. New Wonder and Roundhead are—"

But Uncle Jerry Chuck didn't wait to hear anything more. Already he was waddling down the hillside toward the garden patch, as fast as he could hurry. "I must make up for lost time," he panted. (Copyright, 1922.)
