

Budget for Army Being Prepared, Need More Men

Military Advisers See Progressive Deterioration Unless Present Policy of Congress Is Changed.

Washington, Sept. 26.—(By A. P.)—Army appropriations estimates for the next fiscal year, calling for the present strength of 12,000 officers and 125,000 enlisted men, will be submitted to the budget conference this week with the assertion of Secretary Weeks and his advisers that progressive deterioration in the military establishment will continue unless the regulars are restored to the strength of 12,000 officers and 150,000 men asked for last year.

The War department, it was explained today, has no option in presenting its figures for next year. It cannot exceed or even equal fully its available appropriations for the present year in preparing its figures for the budget bureau. Yet there is known to be grave concern felt by department officials over reports from corps area headquarters as to the effects of the last slash made by congress, now becoming apparent at army centers.

Some officers declare that the War department may be compelled to ask to be relieved of some of its mission if more adequate provision for the work cannot be made. To what extent it may be necessary to throw overboard the nonregular aspect of the present military policy of the government, like the organized reserve system built out of war-experience, no official has been willing to suggest.

There is reason to believe that the situation has already been outlined in administration circles accompanied by a statement of the judgment of Secretary Weeks and his advisers, but that only grave consideration of national economy would justify such impairment of the national defense scheme worked out by congress in 1920 as has already resulted from cutting the regular army to its present size.

The success of the three-part army plan, if it is financially possible to carry it out, is believed by army officials to have been assured beyond doubt by the spirit displayed in the officers' reserve corps. National guard and civilian military training camps this summer. They found every evidence of high enthusiasm among the young men seeking training. The difficulty was to provide training for all who applied.

Farmer Labor Tieup Failed, Says Townley

Norfolk, Neb., Sept. 26.—(Special.)—Speaking before about 100 farmers and railroad men here A. C. Townley, Nonpartisan league leader, declared that his old idea of a third party had been glimmering when he found all society against it. He said that he had learned after eight years of hard work that it is impossible to get the farmers and laboring men to vote together so that they can have more votes "than any other party." Farmers won't vote together, neither will the laboring men," Townley said, "and all that now remains for them to do is to use what balance of power they have by endorsing one of the big political candidates."

The speaker declared that Lincoln by voting for municipal coal yards had taken a long step toward socialism and that had the league suggested this, it would have been criticized. He told his audience that laborers and farmers must use their intelligence in the future.

Livestock Show on

Norfolk, Neb., Sept. 26.—(Special Telegram)—The district livestock exposition opened here today with big entries of cattle and fancy hogs. One thousand feeding cattle are on exhibit. The show ends Friday with a big sale of feeders. Dr. Condra is to speak Thursday afternoon.

In the cool of the morning, several hours before dawn, every WELCH restaurant serves Omaha hunters who are going out after a shot at the ducks. They are a hardy bunch of fellows, these hunters, because weather and road conditions never stop them. They come into WELCH'S, eat a hearty breakfast, order up sandwiches and cake to take with them. Fill up their thermos bottles, with delicious and aromatic coffee and away they go in their boots and hunting coats. Good luck to them.

No need to wait for the daily getting breakfast before you start. Fill up at WELCH'S—before 8:00 and all night.
