Auxiliary Women to Have Gala Convention

American Legion auxiliary women left Monday evening for New Orleans. They are the Mesdames John K. Martin, Frank Kennedy, Pat Boyle, E. E. McKnight, W. P. Metten, Paul Leidy, T. R. Inman, Oliver Kreshner, C. C. Coffey and the Mesdames Elsa Odman, Florence Barr, Bess Morris, Minnie and Josephine Braun, Clara and Caroline Christensen, Bertha Gotschman, Mollie O'Malley, Vera Gustaf, Thyrza Brandt, Pearl Larson, Corrine Brown, Carolyn Giamber, Elizabeth Olsenburg and Dorothy Younger. Elaborate entertainment has been arranged for the delegates. "The Log on the Fire" describes the program as follows:

The famous Southern Yacht club will be the scene of the pages' tea, to be held Monday afternoon. The stars are sending their prettiest girls—one from each—as pages, and the men guests will be, in addition to the distinguished Log members, the younger officers from the English, French and Italian warships in port. Mrs. Pat Boyle will be Nebraska's page.

No hundred delegates will be entertained at the "White Elephant" Monday. Mrs. K. Martin is chairman. There will be a table for each state, arranged in geographical order. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, auxiliary national president; Mrs. Ida Clyde Clark, editor of "Petrol Review"; Mrs. Mary Pershing, sister of General Pershing; and Mrs. Sara C. Englehart, secretary of the American Library association.

After the dinner the guests will go to Jackson Square, which will be turned into Paris for the French fete. There will be 500 guests—distinguished persons in attendance at both the legion and auxiliary conventions—on the reception to be held by the Colonial Dames at the Delgado Art museum the afternoon of Tuesday, October 17. Three carnival balls in the evening will conclude the day for the auxiliary guests.

Seated by states in a large grandstand, the auxiliary women will watch the legion convention parade the afternoon of October 13. That night the only evening session of the auxiliary convention will take place. Afterwards the women will be taken to a ball show on the Mississippi river, which will reproduce the entertainments staged by the welfare organizations in France.

Motor tours to the old French quarter and about the city will occupy the auxiliary women Thursday. The trips will be followed by tea at the quarter club and talks on historic New Orleans at Jackson square. There will also be harbor trips Thursday, and at night a night bombing raid in imitation of the bombardments staged by the Germans at the front.

Friday, the last day of the convention, there will be a number of private parties.

Omahans in New York Dine Together. Word has just come that Miss Elizabeth Barker, who is spending the winter studying at Columbia university; Mrs. Leonard Treator, and Gwyer Yates, were in the audience at the Zigzag Follies, and dined together afterwards at the Hotel Astor.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES FURTHER TALES OF JIMMY RABBIT BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XI. The Rabbit Cat. Whisking around a raspberry bush at the edge of Farmer Green's garden, Jimmy Rabbit came to a sudden halt. Before him a strange dame crouched in the grass. She did not notice Jimmy Rabbit. Her eyes were watching the forward flutterings of a young bird—one of Jolly Robin's latest brood.

"Well, well, well! What's this?" Jimmy Rabbit murmured. At first he had no thought that the strange lady was a cat. But a second look made him somewhat doubtful. Where was her tail? The lady certainly had no more of a tail than he had himself.

Jimmy Rabbit sat up and stared at this odd person. Then he cocked an ear towards her. She must have caught the movement of that ear out of the corner of her eye, for she turned her head upon her long, thin neck and glared at him.

"What are you doing here?" she snapped. "Nothing, ma'am," Jimmy Rabbit replied politely. "I'm just looking at the garden."

"You're spying on my garden," she insisted. "You're spying on my garden. Go away! You're spying on my garden. Go away! You're spying on my garden. Go away!"

"I'm the Rabbit Cat," this peculiar person answered. "I supposed that every body knew that I had come here to help Miss Kitty Cat rid the farmhouse and the barns of mice."

"The Rabbit Cat," Jimmy Rabbit exclaimed. "I never heard of you before. I never knew there was such a creature."

The Rabbit Cat made no reply to this remark. She only yawned. And reaching out a long hind leg, she scratched her left ear.

"If you came here to ask questions, why are you asking such silly ones?" the Rabbit Cat retorted. "Jimmy Rabbit said nothing more."
