

Court to Decide Who Gets Coin in Gambling House

Pool Hall Robbed by Loser in Game of Chance; Jury Holds Prisoner Not Guilty.

Sheridan, Wyo., Oct. 23.—Serving papers upon himself is getting to be a daily task of Sheriff "Dolph" Thomas of Sheridan county, and he says he wonders where it all will end, for no less than three times in as many days he has had to serve papers upon himself to make answer to cases filed against him in district court.

And all because one stormy Sunday evening last December when most of Sheridan was at church, Otto Haegger is alleged to have robbed the Palace pool hall of $499.02 in silver, $185 of which he said he had lost earlier in the evening.

Haegger was taken before a jury in the district court and admitted robbing the game, which he said was being conducted in a specially built casino beneath Main street's sidewalk within a block of the police station.

Honesty Best Policy.
The jury decided that "honesty is the best policy," and after deliberating 10 minutes upon Haegger's candid story returned a verdict of "not guilty."

With a verdict of "not guilty," Haegger's attorney said that if he didn't steal it, the only logical thing to do was to secure the money for Haegger.

Sheriff Thomas, with whom the money had been entrusted when Haegger was arrested, didn't "get" the lawyer's line of talk and balked at the idea of giving to Haegger the money after Haegger had told the court he stole it, even though a jury of 12 representative men had acquitted him of the charge.

Tom Haegger had said he had lost $185 of it in a game, but even that amount the sheriff couldn't figure belonged to him any longer.

Not Taking Chances.
"I'm not taking any chances of having to pay it back to the court out of my salary of $40 a week," said the sheriff.

Then, Orin Moore, whom Haegger arrested on his behalf with the sheriff, filed on behalf of Haegger to force the sheriff to give over the money. This was time number one for the sheriff to serve papers upon himself to make answer to the allegation.

Then Orin Moore, whom Haegger said in court was "running the game," called the sheriff into a quiet corner and suggested that he be given the money. Another refusal and another suit.

Later W. F. Keith, proprietor of the pool hall, whose innocent looking table covered over with their Sabbath dresses concealed more interesting tables in the sidewalk casino, filed suit to the sheriff.

Was House Funds.
"Say, Dolph, how about handing over that money? That was house funds, and I've got to have it," he said.

But Keith had told the court that it was money he had exchanged with Moore for currency in place of the bulky silver that had been collected, as he said, "on Saturday night's pool games."

"There's too many of you birds claiming this coin, and if you get it, it'll be because you tell it to the judge. Good-bye."

And so Keith sued the sheriff.

Wallace Last Cabinet Member to Adopt Auto

Secretary of Agriculture Abandons Span of Spanking Bays—Cabinet Now Completely Motorized.

Washington, Oct. 6.—The secretary of agriculture, Henry C. Wallace of Iowa, is the last member of President Harding's official family to adopt the automobile. While other members of the cabinet ride to and from the White House in luxurious automobiles furnished at government expense, Secretary Wallace, like his predecessors, has been content to dash up to the executive mansion behind a spanking pair of bays drawing a brougham.

But the lure of the automobile was too much for the cabinet member who looks after the interests of the farmers. When the bill appropriating the money for the maintenance of the Agricultural department during the present fiscal year was being drawn Secretary Wallace had an item inserted appropriating money for the purchase of an automobile for his official use. The appropriation became available on July 1, and a handsome limousine, by far the most luxurious possessed by any cabinet member, was purchased for Secretary Wallace.

Grandson Liked Team.
Just before he discarded his familiar bays and brougham for the new car, Secretary Wallace brought his young grandson to the White House. The boy confessed that it was the first time he had ever ridden behind a team of horses and evinced much delight in the experience.

Asked if he were not afraid that the farmers would censure him for discarding horses for the automobile, Secretary Wallace smilingly replied that it was a poor farmer, indeed, these days who did not own an automobile.

Cabinet Now Motorized.
With the advent of the new car, President Harding's cabinet is now completely motorized. William Howard Taft was the first president to adopt the automobile as his official vehicle. Gradually the members of the cabinet changed over from horse-drawn carriages to motor cars, and the postmaster general and the secretary of agriculture were the only holders of cabinet portfolios who remained faithful to the horse and carriage. Postmaster General Burleson detested automobiles, but when Will Hays succeeded him Hays secured a snappy roadster for his official use. And now Secretary Wallace has completed the motorization of the cabinet.

The gas cocks are the simplest, yet the most efficient. Turning or adjusting the sleeve of the cap to right or left in connection with the air mixer or burner increases or decreases the gas flow so as to obtain perfect combustion. The many other points that add immeasurably to the usefulness of the "Alcazar."
