Dublin People Parade Streets as Fights Rage

Residents Go About Business Despite Warnings and Unmindful of Lurking Death.

Dublin, Oct. 21 .- "The provisional government expects attacks in various parts of the city tonight and the population is warned to keep off the

This notice given the utmost pullicity caused a thrill for me when I landed in Dublin on Saturday night. It was with the feeling of adventura that I timidly stepped out of my hotel after dinner. I expected to find deseried streets; instead I found throogs. An armored car, with rifles pointing and bristling from all sides, sweet up the street. Somewhere in the distance I heard the crack of a rifie. I feit an atmosphere of war, The citzens of Dublin apparently feit perfectly safe, for they went happily on their way.

Venturing further into the heart o the city, I found Dublin a nermal city, with a normal Saturday night, Young, blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked girls duty, died early Saturday morning at wandered aimlessly up and down the his home, 4508 North Twentieth street streets, hanging on the arms of after a long illness. For years there has been neral. Besides the widow, two sons spasmodic war in Dublin, and the and a daughter, living in Colorado, people are accustomed to war, hence they go about their business unmindful of lurking death or danger. Tired of War.

Dublin is worn and tired of war, despite the apparent carefree air of its people. No normal city can with stand years of open and guerrilla war fare without tiring of it. In the faces of the people of Dublin, beneath their smiles, are the marks of war-weary people. The Irish people are a kind. soft spoken and gentle people, whose nature is in danger of being gradually warped by continuous warfare.

There is courage in Ireland, courage and to spare, but I gather that what Ireland wants most is peace, and cerwhat Ireland needs most is

Is Drawn Closer Villagers of Doorn View Approaching Marriage of Former Emperor With Air of Indifference.

Doors, Holland, Oct. 21.—(By A. P. The veil of secrecy that has hidden he life of the former kalser since took up his residence in Holland, becomes more impenetrable than ever before as curiousity increases, due to his forthcoming marriage with the Princess of Reuss.

This curiousity does not greatly af flict the villagers of Doorn. They view the approaching nuptials with an air of indifference, even of boredom. Nine-tenths of them are austere Calvinists and they look upon pomp and panoply as sinful vanities. Being strict Sabbatharians, they disapprove of William's choice of Sunday as the day for the wedding feast.

But they do not say so out loud, at least. The tradesmen who cater to William's chateau, and the workmen who occasionally are given jobs on the estate, are extremely recticent about it all.

Even more silent are those in the former kaiser's entourage. The few Dutch aristocrats who, from time to time are received as visitors to the former emperor's retreat, cloak themselves with a hauteur and a superior air of reserve that even the nerviest reporter cannot penetrate. All that he correpsondents have found out is that both the civil and religious wedding ceremoneles are to take place November 5, within the precincts of the chateau, and thet they will be attended by a Dutch government secretary from The Hague, the governor of the province of Utrecht; the burgomaster of Doorn, a few of the Dutch nobility residing on neighboring estates, and about 50 invited guests from Germany, mainly dignitaries under the old regime and army generals.
