Married Life of Helen and Warren

Married Life of Helen and Warren

Helen Ignores the Captain's Orders and Ruthlessly Floods Their Stateroom.

"You ought've packed some of this stuff tonight," scowled Warren, glowering about the cluttered stateroom for a place to hang his dinner coat.

"Why, dear, I'll have plenty of time in the morning—we won't land before noon," Helen was straining after an elusive hook in the back of her evening gown.

"You always leave everything to the last minute," ripping off his collar. "Don't you see that notice! All trunks must be ready by 10."

"I'll get up early," protesting. "Oh, he's shut both portholes." "Yes, and they'll stay shut," grimly. "Going to be rough tonight—always is just off the French coast. That ventilator's open—plenty of air."

But the ventilator gave very little air. The one stormy night of the voyage when both portholes had been closed, Helen had almost suffocated. And now this last night so near land—surely it could not be very rough.

"What's you rining for?" demanded Warren, as she touched the bell. "I'm going to ask him to open one just a little. I'll be sick without any air."

"Yes, and have the whole place flooded. You can't travel like any body else—always putting up a kick about air! Next time—"

"Hush—sh, dear, here he is!" opening the door to the steward's knock. "Steward, can't we have one of these portholes open? It's stifling in here!"

"Sorry m'am, but we've just had orders from the bridge to keep them closed. It's blowing up a bit."

"Hope you're satisfied," growled Warren as the door closed. "Now stop chewing the rag and turn in. Look of air seem'd never to trouble Warren, and he soon was sleeping stentoriously. But Helen could hardly breathe in the sickening room.

It was not rough! Noiselessly she climbed up and peered out the thick round glass. A black starless night, but the frothing waves, faintly lit by the deck lights, seemed harmless far below. It would take a much stronger wind to lash them up to their portholes.

To open one would be perfectly safe. If it should grow rough in the night, she could close it.

Braving she could not turn the great brass screw, she stole out to look for the wrench with which the steward had screwed it down. She found it on the ledge under the corridor porthole that was also closed.

Back in their stateroom, the obtuse screw finally yielding, the porthole swung open, letting in a rush of cool salt air.

Even as she drank in the grateful freshness, the "Orders from the Bridge" ominously shadowed her thoughts.

But she slept very lightly. The first rising wave would arouse her. With this reassurance, the fresh air and murmurous sea soon lulled her to a deep dreamless oblivion.

"Bang! A thunderous crash! A dash of icy water in her face brought a terrified consciousness.

"Hell! Warren's explosion tore through the darkness.

The next second he had switched and the light and bounded from his berth in spluttering, driving fury.

One panic-stricken glance showed Helen the drenched stateroom. With fear-wakened fingers she was trying to close the porthole.

"What in blazes!" roared Warren. "How'd that damn thing get open?" "Could—could it have blown open?" she faltered, frightened into the near lie.

"Blown open" shoving away her futile efforts he banged the porthole shut. "Where'd this come from?" he thundered.

Shrinking she gazed at the betraying wrench he snatched from the ledge.

"Your means crazy for air?" in a belated rage. "You ought to be put in a strait jacket! Just look at this mess!"

"We're drowned out in here," Warren flung open the door.

In blank consternation the steward stared about the drenched stateroom.

"I don't see how this happened, sir. I screwed down those portholes myself—noon as I got the orders from the bridge."

"Yes, but Mrs. Curtis thought she knew more than the captain," grimly. "She hunted up your wrench and opened one."

Her crimson face averted, Helen felt the steward's gaze as she wiped off the dripping woodwork with Warren's discarded pajama coat.

"Don't worry, m'am, worse things than this happen at sea," the kind-hearted steward pitied her distress. "That was a pretty big wave—but I'll soon fix you up."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," almost breaking down at his kindness. "But it was suffocating—and it seemed so smooth—"

"Treacherous waters along here. Get a lot of cross currents—blows up mighty quick. I'd better screw that down a bit more," as another lashing wave sent a thin stream trickling through the porthole.

He wiped off the water-beaded walls and ceiling, remade the berths with fresh bedclothes and changed the soaked pillows.

While Helen fluttered about trying to help, Warren, hunched up in the one chair, his overcoat substituting for his wet bathrobe, watched the hurried renovations in surly silence.

"Now I think you're all right," the steward was giving the last drying touches. "Anything else you want, m'am?"

"No, no, thank you so much," murmured Helen, resolving to supplement the generous tip Warren always gave.

When the door closed after him, Warren flung off his coat and rolled into his dry berth.

"Well, he was a darn sight more decent than I'd have been. All that work because of your fool stunt! I'd have felt like reporting you to the captain. Damnable! Look at my watch!"

With another explosive outburst he extracted his watch from the soaked wall pocket by his pillow.

"Wait, let me dry it off," recklessly snatching up her dry petticoat. "It's only the case—it hasn't gone through to the works. I got in the tub with my wrist watch and it didn't hurt it a bit!"

But this proved an unfortunate admission, as it elicited further acrid comments on her mentality.

"Got in the tub with your wrist watch, eh? Just like you. Haven't the brains of a rabbit."

Then suddenly sitting up in bed, he glared under the opposite berth.

"What's that under there. Looks like a broken bottle."

"My foot in my sock! That wave knocked it off," hastily gathering up the fragments.

"Now I'll get broken glass in my feet—can't put on those wet slippers."

"I'll get it all up every piece," picking up the tiny slivers.

"Huh, you've made a fine mess! You can't travel like anybody else! Always got to have every blasted window open. Never satisfied until you—"

"Oh, dear, don't scold any more," tremulously. "It can't be helped now. I'll never say another word about opening a porthole."

Attacked at Sea By Appendicitis

Man Is Treated by Wireless From Ship Fifty Miles Away

A sailor on the small steamer "Seaborn" was taken suddenly ill. There was no doctor aboard to give relief. A wireless message was sent to a ship fifty miles away and the doctor of the ship diagnosed the man as appendicitis. Then he treated the man by wireless for four days, until it was reported he was on the way to recovery.

A Treacherous Disease
Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons apparently in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, which may be accompanied by a sharp pain in the right side of the abdomen, which may be accompanied by a sharp pain in the right side of the abdomen, which may be accompanied by a sharp pain in the right side of the abdomen.

Let's Go Shopping with Polly

When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock. And you hear the kyock and gobble of the struttin' turkey cock. And the clackin' of the guineys, and the cluckin' of the hens, And the roosters hallylooyer as he tiptoes on the fence.

They's something kindo' hearty-like about the atmosphere. When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here— Of course you miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees, And the humble of the hummin'-birds and buzzin' of the bees, But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze Of a crisp and sunny morning of the slyly autumn days Is a pictur' that no painter has the colorin' to mock— When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock.

DEAR FASHION FOLK—
THE DRESS PARADE is of such unusual interest this year that I must tell just a little of the latest models of the hour. "Shall the short frock stay, or go," isn't the only question to consider. While straight all-haute continues to be one of the favored modes of the fall and winter season, there are others which are of a decided interest. The circular skirt is steadily gaining in popularity, while godelts reminiscent of the '90s are introduced.

Sleeves are perhaps the most exciting part of the costume just at present. They may be long with a deep point on the order of those worn in the middle ages, they may be long and full, gathering into a narrow cuff at the wrist like those worn by the peasants of the Balkans, or they may be slit, although a bit of the arm to show, in fact their modes are many and they do much to give a chic air to the costume.

The Pomegranate Shop.
THE very name suggests all sorts of pretty things and that is just what you will find in the little shop opened yesterday by Mrs. Mary Lydia Rowe in the Morris Apts., 18th and Dodge streets. Besides the many unique and unusual gifts, Mrs. Rowe will furnish ideas for dinners and parties and will design and make to order favors and decorations at very low prices.

Weeds May Be Made as Beautiful as Flowers.
YES, JUST common weeds that you can gather in any empty lot or field. The process is very easy, just cut on the various colors in combinations that you desire with a brush and then let them dry. All the beautiful bronze colors may be secured at the A. Hoese company, 1513 Douglas, at only 25 cents each. And by the way, when you cut your colors of them, they will show you just how to do the work. Try gathering a few varieties and see what attractive home decorations you will have.

Your Jewelry Reflects Your Taste.
WEATHER at work, or play, your jewelry is conspicuous. If you desire that feeling of self-satisfaction in appearance which really good jewelry gives you, you will be delighted to know that at Kroyer's Jewelry Shop, 15 Douglas street, you may choose from exquisite assortments of rings, watches, etc. of the very best quality, and if not convenient to pay all cash, arrangements can be made to divide the payments, and make them extend over a period of time. Prices are exceptionally low, for instance a beautiful little 14-karat white gold watch was only $50, and a handsome white gold ring with genuine diamond setting was only $200.

Exclusive Gowns at Moderate Prices.
Most women have the idea that gowns of exclusive design must necessarily be high in price. This idea has been erased from the minds of those who have visited LaBoehlin's in the Fontenelle. The way of the discriminating instinctively leads to this shop where modes of unusual design may be found at prices unusually moderate. Miss LaBoehlin is serving particular women who desire originality and distinction in dress, but who do not necessarily want to pay a great amount. Beautiful gowns for every occasion, luxurious coats of the most fashionable materials and lines may be selected in an atmosphere that is different. She will be delighted to show you some of her latest creations.

Luxurious Velvets Reign Supreme for the Winter Costume.
UNDOUBTEDLY, velvet is to be the smartest material for the coming season. In fact, it is already the undisputed favorite with many of the most famous designers. It is not as perishable a fabric as many imagine for it can be kept in perfect condition by careful steaming. It gives soft clinging lines so desirable to the majority of figures and lines that are fashionable this year. An extremely fine assortment of chiffon velvets are being shown at the Silk Shop, 117 Douglas street, in black and navy as well as in all the new evening shades. They are marvelously reasonable from $4.95 up. Why not decide right now to get a velvet dress for the coming winter?

Styles to Satisfy the Discriminating Woman, That Are Strictly in Accord With Paris Fashions.
THE EVER-INCREASING popularity of the style selections at the "Dress Shoppe" among the smarter-dressed women of this section is due to the experience with which Miss McGuire and Mrs. McCoy, owners of the shop, select their garments. Their models are exclusive and assure you of decidedly individual wear. New frocks and coats are arriving daily and are being priced at extremely moderate prices. Miss McGuire, who is now in New York, will be home this week with many beautiful new models which you will enjoy seeing.

Old Furs Made New Again—And Oh, What a Big Saving It Would Be.
PERHAPS somewhere in the house you have an old furpiece that is out of style—wouldn't it be the time to hunt it up and take it to Dresser's, on 2317 Parman, and have them make it over for you? For a very small sum you can have a beautiful new furpiece that you will enjoy wearing and one that your friends will admire. Call Atlantic 8115 and ask them about their fur repair service. You will be interested I am sure.

Rock A Bye Baby on the Tree Top.
SWEETLY CRONES the tiny adored Mammy did to the baby doll in the cradle under the tree, and while Mammy rocks, baby the other little babies are sitting out on the grass or are sitting on the porch that is just built for dolls. But where is this wonderful scene? Why at "Gala Shoppe" located at 115 South Seventh street. Nearly all the dolls in the window are dressed to hand and have dresses, bonnets and rompers that will come off and on. And the prices for these dolls are extremely low, in fact, far lower than you can find elsewhere. Don't fail to bring the children and let them see the dolls that cry.

Green's—The Place to Get a Delicious Luncheon.
FRIENDS of Lester Anderson, well known exterior, will be glad to hear that he is now owner of the soda fountain and lunch counter at Green's Pharmacy, where he is serving a special hot luncheon for 15c, as well as many other delights.

Valves rule supreme in dress and evening gowns. Let not your winter wardrobe be minus a velvet evening gown if you'd follow fashion. You can have it in many forms and styles—but it must be velvet.

Large Soft, Natural Waves Instead of Unbecoming Straight Hair?
WOULDN'T it be lovely to wake up in the morning and find the annoying straight hair had been changed into soft curly locks. It would seem like a dream, but that is just what will happen if you have a famous Nettle Wave under the direction of Mr. Frankie or Mr. Robert, owners of the Black and White Room, the Salon de Beauté and the Blackstone Shop. Whether you have fine hair or white hair, you can have it successfully for you by this successful process. You will enjoy having your hair permanently waved. Go into one of their shops this week and make an appointment.

Do You Wear a Mask?
OR is your real face fresh and blooming? Tanned cheeks sunburned necks and freckled noses are in evidence everywhere—the gift of a too friendly sun. Wind and dust have probably attacked your skin, fear, worry and illness have done their bit to line it, and to make it dull and sallow by retarding the circulation. Gradually your freshness has disappeared behind a mask of years. How remove it? With another mask—a mask of beauty that you can secure at the Black and White Room, Burgess-Nash, The Salon de Beauté, Fontenelle, or the Blackstone Hotel. They will give you a Lorraine treatment which will clear your face of lines, impurities and dead cuticle, and leave it fresh and radiant as dawn.

Mirrors—Oval or Oval—They Are Equally Attractive.
HOW FORTUNATE that the shipment of polychrome mirrors which has been expected daily at the Brandon Picture Shop, should arrive at the very time when everyone is beautifying their homes for winter. Of course you will want one of these mirrors with decoration either at the top or sides, and especially as they are priced at only $1.95 each. They come in the delicate shades which distinguish the polychrome from all others. Don't delay sending in your order as there is but a limited number to be sold at this low price.

Milady Must Have Gloves for Every Occasion.
All imported gloves purchased since the tariff became a law are much higher in price and will continue to advance. That is the reason that the wise woman is selecting her gloves now for the coming season. Fancy cuff gauntlets with tasteful contrasting trimmings and long gloves in kid and chamoisette are very popular and will be until Christmas. Then during the extreme cold weather brushed wool gauntlets with fancy cuffs will be worn extensively. At Hayden's you will find a splendid assortment of the finest quality gloves in all styles and the prices are very low while their present supply lasts. They are advising making your selections now before you have to pay more.

A Bit of Embroidery or a Sparkling Bead Make the Frock or Coat Much More Effective.
TO be absolutely up-to-the-minute your new frock or coat must have a touch of embroidery or a few beads here and there. The Ideal Button and Pleating company in the Brown Block, 10th and Douglas, does exquisite work, both by machine and by hand. If the skirt or pants are to be pleated the Ideal will do it for you whether the material be silk or wool, and their prices are so reasonable.

Araban Nights Torbans for Restaurant Dances or Evening Wear.
FOR the afternoon tea dances, or the after-theater supper dances, Fashion's newest conceit is a metal cloth turban brought out of the colorful pictures of the Arabian Nights stories. It is the Arabian Nights turban adapted to the present mode by allowing the hat to come well over the face and giving it the height necessary to make it becoming to wear with the new suits and coats. The same styles are found made up in bright-colored velvets, sometimes trimmed with touches of metallic cloth. Medium-sized black hats have favor with the turbans. Burgess-Nash are showing a beautiful assortment of these favored styles at prices that will be certain to please.

Brighten the Home With Flowers.
THE dull, dark days of winter can be lightened and made cheery by planting a few bulbs in pots to bloom during the next few weeks. And as regards the great outdoor garden, it is time to plant autumn bulbs. At the Brandon Flower shop there are Darwin tulips at the dozen; double and single tulips at The Garden department at the week, or 2 for 25c. Hyacinths, snails, at 14.95 a dozen, narcissus, at 1.95 a dozen. All colors and sizes stock. Send your order to 545.

A Three-quarter length Cooney coat has been put on special sale at only $24.95.
