

Glimpses of Forthcoming Cinema Art on Omaha Screens

Note the likeness between Ben's roguish smile and the features of the statue. "That's me all over," exclaimed Ben. The comedian will appear in some big comedy hits this season. Ben appeared in person recently at the World theater.

In thoughtful mood, Pola Negri, European actress, is here shown. She arrived in this country to appear as a star in Paramount pictures.

The Happers' idol, Rudy Valentino, will flash across the screen soon in the role of an Indian prince in "The Young Hottentot."

Florence Vidor is coming into the limelight as an emotional actress. Her latest success is in "Skin Deep."

Hasn't Bebe Daniels the beautiful eyes? She has a fascinating role in "Singed Wings," now under production.

This is a late one of Milton Sills, but it took some facial surgery to do it. The star portrays a crook role in "Skin Deep," presaged as one of the big pictures of the season. It will show at the Rialto theater.

Mary Thurman is considered one of the season's beauties in pictures, and already has gained Omaha popularity among audiences at the Sun.

Charlotte Stevens, comedienne, won a beauty contest in Chicago. Now she's winning laurels on the screen in comedies.

Charming, eh? To Louise Falwick in a scene from "East Is West," to play soon at the Strand theater.

Becoming, isn't it? Here is Betty Compson in a shade and light effect, as she will appear in one of the season's picture comedies in "Ye Have and Ye Hold."

Wardrobe Roberts has become one of the grand old character actors on the screen. In the role of Uncle Josh in "The Old Homestead," soon to be current here, the star comes into his own.
