A CLOSE-UP FROM NORRIS. "Not only did he fail to aid the farm bloc, but no progressive senator ever dreamed of asking Hitchcock for aid of any progressive measure."

The men and women of Nebraska have not been able to sit in the senate and see Hitchcock's seat unoccupied day after day when matters of the utmost national importance were being decided.

The men and women of Nebraska have not seen him make for the shelter of the cloak room to avoid going on record on questions in which the interests of the middle west clashed with the interests of Hitchcock's eastern friends and associates.

Senator Norris, however, has witnessed innumerable scenes of this sort, and he is now telling the people of Nebraska about them.

With an election staring him in the face the democratic candidate mingles one more among the people of Nebraska. He now professes the greatest desire to impose heavier taxes on the wealthy class of which he is a member.

Norris turns back the record to the days of war profiteering and shows that when the opportunity actually came to lift the burdens from the common people, the willingness was not there.

An amendment was offered to tax large wealth and income where it could be paid with least difficulty. It would have yielded $450,000,000 a year.

That was in the day when profiteers were supreme—and Hitchcock refused to lift his hand to break their hold. War profits and excess profits that drained the federal treasury and the pockets of the people had his approval then.

One of the many expensively printed pamphlets that the democratic machine is broadcasting over the state attempts to assure rural voters that Hitchcock has voted and worked in the interests of his farm constituents.

The irrigation farmers of western Nebraska needed federal assistance. A bill that would have been a boon to them could have been passed.

As a member of the farm bloc Senator Norris has been in the closest contact with legislation of this sort. When he declares that never once did Hitchcock offer his support to the farm bloc, he disposes of the whole mass of feigned sympathy for the lot of the farmer.

It is a close-up view that Senator Norris gives. These facts explain the waning campaign of the democratic candidate. The close-up becomes a fade-out as the shutter is gradually closed and the light dies out.

SIoux AND THE BLACK HILLS. A lot of memories will be revived by the announcement from Pierre that certain Sioux Indians think of going into court to establish title to the entire Black Hills region.

tribes, who peopled the pine-shaded canyons with all sorts of evil spirits, but daring and energetic white men exorcised the ghosts from the gulches, and made of the Black Hills a veritable paradise, redeeming its reputation of being "the richest 100 miles square" in the world.

KINDNESS, OR MISTAKE? A man who has not set foot outside prison walls in fifty years has just been liberated from the penitentiary at Lansing, Mich.

In 1872 the world thought it was making progress. When the prison doors closed on this same man the United States had fewer than 40,000,000 inhabitants; now, it has over 107,000,000.

Nebraska Politics

O'Neill Frontier: Senator Hitchcock, one of the most bitter opponents of woman suffrage, has found it necessary to import several paid women speakers of national notoriety into Nebraska to speak to Nebraska women.

York Republican: Time was when William Jennings Bryan could come into his home state a few days before election, mix himself to the rear end of a special train and pass through the country, creating great enthusiasm for the democratic ticket.

Howell or Hitchcock? Grand Island Herald: Howell or Hitchcock, is the Nebraska "war cry" for the coming election.

Keosauqua Hub: Ingeniously vicious and deliberately false in the assertion made the Omaha World-Herald that deflation in currency, credit and farm prices has been caused directly by republican manipulation of the Federal Reserve system.

The Tariff and the West. Scottsbluff Republican: Senator Beveridge, who not even Bill Maguire will call a reactionary, in his opening speech in his campaign for the senate in Indiana, goes over a bit of history which shows that the democrats are producing nothing new in their fight on the tariff bill.

Omaha Record: One of the hard nuts for our democratic friends to crack, who are making so much noise about the tariff, is the fact that so many democrats in congress voted for it.

York Democrat: Judge Howard said that some are holding him responsible for so many of the women wearing their hair over their ears.

Fremont Tribune: Charles W. Bryan, in furthering his ambitions to be the next governor of Nebraska, is concentrating his attack on the "code" system inaugurated by Governor McKelvie.

Grand Island Independent: In April, 1922, Bryan said that he was not a dead issue in Nebraska and that whoever said it was told an untruth.

Senator Hitchcock Speaks. Elgin Review: Hitchcock was here Monday evening and delivered a political speech at the Elgin opera house.

One Sound Tariff Answer. Where will the blow fall, on the American or the foreign worker? An Omaha merchant, jobber of men's furnishings, made this statement at a luncheon meeting on Monday.
