

Wallace Tells of Republican Aid to Farmers

Secretary of Agriculture, Speaking at Hastings, Outlines Legislation Passed by Congress.

Hastings, Neb., Oct. 27.—Special Telegram.—The large audience which this afternoon heard the first of four speeches Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will deliver in Nebraska were profoundly impressed with the direct benefit to agriculture he said may be expected to congress since March, 1921.

The emergency tariff, the revival of the Farm Credit corporation, the doubling of the capital of the farm land banks and the law enacted to protect farmers' cooperative marketing associations from unfair prosecution were said to embody more directly beneficial results to the agricultural interests than any other legislation that had been accomplished in five times the time.

The emergency tariff, he said, has checked the dumping of top of our already large surplus of great quantities of agricultural products which had piled up in other countries during the period that the war interfered with shipping. The federal farm land bank legislation, he declared, had permitted the joint stock land banks to modify their interest rate, thus making available large sums of money for mortgage loans on farms at the time when it was most needed.

"And," continued Secretary Wallace, "none of the foregoing legislation can be looked upon as class legislation. None of it helps the farmer at the expense of other groups."

The secretary was met at Lawrence by Leo Stuhm, state secretary of agriculture, and the state engineer, George E. Johnson, and by them was acquainted with the supplemental water project contemplated by four western Nebraska counties. The Department of Agriculture, Mr. Wallace said, can be relied upon to render such service as it can for the promotion of this as well as all other general agricultural interests.

He spoke in Holdrege tonight and tomorrow will make a personal inspection of the supplemental water territory, ending the day with a speech in Grand Island.

Courtesy Pays

COURTESY pays. It pays as big in the affairs of a department store as it does in the life of an individual. The one who makes it a point to be courteous to all with whom he comes in contact finds himself cultivating a serene state of consciousness and profits by it. He profits by it with respect to his business affairs, but he finds his larger recompense in the happiness that continually flows into the lives of well-poised men and women.

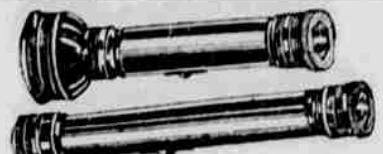

A young girl, in love with life and bubbling over with joy, turned from a crowd of young and old and exclaimed to a friend: "Don't you just love folks?" It was not difficult for her to be kind and courteous. With her it was a habit faithfully cultivated. It paid her in the friendships it won for her. Moreover, it provided her with that attitude toward life which insures happiness to those who maintain it.

Politeness, then, is not only a civic duty, but it is a personal privilege. Whether it be displayed by peasant or king, in cottage or in mansion, in workshop, in counting room or in the crowded waysfairs of a city, it pays. Fortunately, indeed, is the man, woman or child who understands why it pays and how big it pays.
