

Lloyd George May Visit U. S. if Election Lost

American Trip of Picturesque Britisher Being Discussed Again Since Fall as Premier.

London, Oct. 28.—By A. P.—Should Mr. Lloyd George fall to obtain a dominating or even a good strategic political position in the coming general elections there are at least two things which may occupy his attention—his long hoped for visit to America, and the writing of his memoirs.

With the receipt of the invitation from Secretary of Labor Davis, on behalf of the American Gorseedd, a Welsh society, the question of the former prime minister's visit to the United States has been revived. His high regard for America and her people has been emphasized in almost every speech since he relinquished the helm of state and it is known he was deeply impressed by the favorable editorial comment which to England following the news of Mr. Davis' invitation.

May Postpone Memoirs.
It is considered very possible that if he turns from political activities, he will go to the United States before planning into his memoirs but because it would give him a rest, or at least a change from his arduous labors and would enable him to look at what he might want to say from a distance giving a better perspective. Then, too, there would be the opportunity of gleaning additional material from the events of the immediate future.

It may be recalled that when there was considerable criticism of his accepting $400,000 for his book, Lloyd George said he intended to give the proceeds to charity, but now that he no longer holds an official position there is some question as to whether he might not see fit to keep the revenue from his pen, as an insurance against adversity during his life "in the wilderness."

Abbey Becomes Shrine.
Westminster Abbey is coming more and more to be regarded as a shrine, not only by the British subjects of the seven seas, but also by thousands of American tourists. While it is impossible to estimate the number of visitors statistically the vergers and other functionaries who watch the comings and goings of the throngs, declare there were vastly more American visitors to the historic edifice last summer than ever before.

At all times when the abbey is open to the public great silent crowds with uncovered heads can be seen about the great reading the inscription which tells the tale of the great host of British Tommies who made the supreme sacrifice.

Women Vote Puzzling.
How will the United Kingdom's 8,000,000 women voters cast their ballots? This question is puzzling many astute politicians and the leaders of the unionist, liberal, labor and other parties are seeking to answer. Meanwhile, all are seeking to bring the women to their respective political folds and making counter claims as to how many of these votes they are assured.

"The trouble with the average British middle class woman is that she is too ignorant politically, and today she forms a big percentage of our voters," declared Dr. Marion Phillips, head organizer of the woman's section of the labor party, in commenting on this point.
"As women only above 20 years, or property owners are allowed to vote at present, they are mostly married. However, the labor women are more intelligent and won't vote as do their husbands."

Asked if there was a possibility of a woman being chosen a member of the new cabinet, as a result of the general elections, Dr. Phillips said:
"We haven't many women with the necessary political experience. So far, we have but two in parliament, of whom one, Lady Astor, is surely not fitted for any such responsible position."
"The British labor party is making great efforts to educate and to get the women's vote in this election. I have no doubt we shall surprise some of the parties which hope to make the woman vote the same way as their husbands."

Church Awaiting State.
The much debated question whether church or state shall control the liberties of individuals has been brought very much to the front by the action of the bishop of Oxford, in writing to the duke of Marlborough requesting him not to attend the Oxford diocesan conference. It also has brought to a head the problem regarding the divorce question and the church and bids fair to cause a serious conflict between the church and state.

"The bishop's ground is that he cannot admit that the duke has the status of a communicant because while the duke has been divorced and remarried, the law of the church, as set forth in the common prayer-book, makes it very clear that it does not recognize divorce."
The duke, through his solicitor, declines the bishop's statement "that he who is divorced does not possess the full status of communicant, and asserts: 'I have the sanction of his parish priest in Oxfordshire and London, with the full knowledge of the proper ecclesiastical authorities."
While most of the clergy support the action of the bishop, others dissent. The divorce law reform union declares the church has every right to impose its laws on its own communion but has no right to enforce the laws of the country outside its own jurisdiction.

The union further declares that Marlborough is legally married, whereas the law of the church says he has contracted an illegitimate union. The incident has aroused widespread interest and is expected to lead to protracted legal proceedings before it is finally settled.

American Methodists Adopted.
American university methods are gradually working their way into the most solid English institutions, as witness the recent additions of extension courses in many English schools, as well as graduation classes and a student governing body.

The latest innovation is the adoption of lecture courses requiring no

Vet Employee Honored by Insurance Company

Edward E. Litz, district superintendent for the Prudential Insurance Company of America, has been honored by the organization with which he has been 25 years, beginning his service here as a house-to-house solicitor and collector. Today he is the head of a local staff of 60 men and women. He has developed the local business from $5,000 insurance in force to the present total of $9,000,000.

At a banquet given last week in his honor at the Hotel Home G. W. Munick, vice president of the company, and J. H. Hickett, assistant secretary, attended as representatives of the home office. On this occasion Mr. Litz was given an engraved testimonial of appreciation and also a diamond set gold watch.

Mr. Litz came to Omaha with one thin dime, a poor boy from Lincoln, Neb., with two feet that could run and two hands that were willing. He set to work carrying a route for The Omaha Bee, worked in a restaurant for his breakfast and supper and was given sleeping accommodations in a morgue in consideration of work which he did.

class recitations, and open to the general public not attending school. King's college of the University of London tried this method last year, with such success that lecture courses in many subjects are now operating. The lectures are given one night each week for the full term, and their popularity is shown by the attendance, the students and public ever-crowding the rooms and necessitating additional lectures. More classes are to be added during the next term to accommodate all who wish to attend.

Oxford, Cambridge and Harrow, however, are still holding out against the new order of things. The methods favored in the line of Dr. Johnson, are followed in those schools where heavy Latin courses are still believed essential to proper education.

The time-honored methods are approved by the older families and the aristocracy, but the newly rich and people of moderate means are sending their children to the schools which are most modern and where class distinction is not so pronounced. This latter class of school has grown rapidly since the war.

Call Picture Wicked.
On the ground that it is "nauseating and wicked," the town council of Blackpool has objected to the hanging in the Blackpool art gallery of Honorable John Collier's painting "Clytemnestra." The council had proposed to buy the picture but after securing it, voted to postpone decision.

The painting which has been exhibited in the Royal Academy, depicts the Clytemnestra of the Greek legend opening from the palace with her lover, Agamemnon, after slaying her royal husband, Agamemnon. Mr. Collier is a prominent artist and society man.
