

Turner Ordered Held for Death of Peacemaker

Man Who Pushed Friend Aside During Quarrel Ordered Tried by Inquest Jury.

A coroner's jury yesterday afternoon recommended trial of George H. Turner in district court for the death of Hugh Riley, his friend, who acted as peacemaker when Turner menaced his mother-in-law Sunday night at 1609 Leavenworth street. Eight witnesses were examined.

As a result of the recommendation, according to Acting Coroner Steinwender, the charge will be one of manslaughter.

Mrs. Mary Turner, wife of the accused man, testified that Riley had been in the habit of visiting with her mother, her husband and herself for the past three or four years. Sunday afternoon, she said, Riley came to the house about 12:30.

According to her testimony, she and her husband had a small argument over the correction of their baby. Mrs. Turner's mother joined in the discussion. At this point Riley came into the room, she said, and her husband pushed him aside, Riley falling to the floor on his face.

Death was due, testified Dr. McCreagh, from an extensive hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been caused by a fall or by a blunt instrument, but not by a clenched fist. Turner did not take the stand in his own behalf.

Blank Shell Wounds Boy; Cousin Sought

Jakie Wagner 15, and his two cousins, Joseph Wagner, 17, and Jennie Wagner, 4, were playing in a house at Thirtieth and Grace streets Monday afternoon.

Jakie was running the sewing machine, according to the story he and Jennie told police. He was using paper instead of cloth and was making all sorts of artistic, fancy and fantastic designs for the edification of little Jennie.

As he rounded out the form of a lion, Joseph is alleged to have called to him:

"Come on. Get away from that sewing machine."

Jakie kept on for the sake of Jennie.

Joseph is said to have snatched a shotgun, cut off that portion of a shell which contains the buckshot, inserted the blank shell into the gun, aimed it at Jakie and pulled the trigger.

Jakie was wounded in the left thigh, Joseph fled.

Police surgeons treated Jakie's wound and police officers began to search for Joseph.

Joseph lives at 2409 North Thirtieth street.

Radio Aerials Across Streets Frowned on by City Council

The city council approved yesterday the city electrical department's refusal to grant permits for the installation of radio aerial wires across downtown streets.

State Fighting to Keep Mrs. Hall From Grand Jury

These are the first posed photographs of Mrs. E. W. Hall since the murder in New Brunswick, N. J., of her husband, Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, and his "wonder heart" choir leader, Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 6.—(By A. P.)—The prosecution in the Hall-Mills murder investigation, it became known last night, intends to avail itself of every legal right to prevent Mrs. Frances Noel Stevens Hall, widow of the slain rector, from appearing before the grand jury which probably will convene this week for an inquiry into the crime.

Mrs. Hall has expressed a willingness to sign a waiver of immunity. The widow would make her plea to appear, it was understood, on the ground that she regards herself as having been put under suspicion by the account given authorities by the so-called "eye-witness," Mrs. Jane Gibson. Under the New Jersey law, she is entitled to the opportunity to clear herself of this suspicion.

Deputy Attorney General Mott, special prosecutor conducting the investigation for the state, will be in New Brunswick on Thursday, according to present reports, to prepare for the presentation of the case before the jury.

James Mills, widower of the slain woman, also expressed a willingness to appear before the grand jury. "They know my alibi," he said "and I'm perfectly willing to appear."

Local authorities said that through the discovery of new witnesses, they had been able to account for almost every moment of the time of Mr. Hall between the hour when he was called from his home on the night of September 14, until after 9, when the shootings are believed to have occurred.

The new witness is said to be David Spedler, a grocer, and his story, which indicates that the rector took a little used route to reach the Phillips farm, is that he met a man answering Mr. Hall's description on the road beyond the end of the trolley line by which Mr. Hall is known to have ridden from his home to the city limits.

Democrats Would Trick Voters by False Signatures

Spurious Circulars Endorsing Democratic Candidates Sent to Electors of Jewish Race.

An 11th-hour campaign trick involving signatures to circulars endorsing democratic candidates was exposed yesterday afternoon.

One circular urges the re-election of Senator Hitchcock. The other favors Lloyd Magney for county attorney and M. L. Endres for sheriff.

Both are addressed to voters of Jewish race, and endorsement of Hitchcock starting out: "Senator Hitchcock has always been a good friend to the Jewish people."

"I wonder if the same trick is being pulled on Methodists and Baptists and the rest," asked an irate recipient.

The Hitchcock endorsement carries 21 purported signatures. Here is the score on these:

D. Hirsch, moved to California. J. Rosen, did not sign. A. Cross, did not sign. Max Rosenthal, did not sign. Twenty-fifth and California streets. Philadelphia three years ago. William Hahn, did not sign. W. Spiegel, did not sign. Of the rest, several are not known in Omaha.

The Magney Endres circular pretends to carry an endorsement of these candidates by the Omaha Hebrew club and the local B'nai B'rith. Presidents of both organizations, Arthur Rosenblum and Dave Greenberg, have written a letter repudiating such an endorsement. Of the names signed to the circular, Alexander Des, A. J. Voller, William Hahn, and F. Spight have made affidavit that they did not sign.

Voller included in his dramatic speech a story that Smith married a gypsy girl in Austria and two years later brutally murdered her father. Smith denied this, saying his wife now is living in Austria with her father. Police have communicated with Austrian authorities to check up Voller's story.

The totals for the year to date are 556 accidents, 12 deaths and 437 injured.

CANCER INHERITANCE.

Cancer is not an inherited disease in the sense of a child of a parent who has had cancer will be born afflicted with the disease, or what all of the children or any considerable percentage of the children of parents that have had cancer will never have the disease.

If we broaden out the term "inherited," we can firmly stretch it enough to make it include cancer.

For instance, because of the greater prevalence of cancer in persons over 45 years of age, we sometimes call that span of life the cancer age. The cause of death of one-tenth the persons dying in the cancer age is attributed to cancer on the certificate.

There are certain families where this proportion rises to one-fifth, or even higher. These are called "cancer families."

Furthermore, cancer is a little more likely to develop in certain organs in some persons than it is in others—the "other's" applying to both the parents and organs.

Maud Slye says: "That which is inherited is a tendency of the tissues of the organ to cancer, and the age at which cancer develops—all these in the case of humans make observation and conclusion difficult."

Not so in the case of a mouse, which may die of old age in less than 12 months after birth, and which rarely lives to be 4 years old. Fortunately mice are very subject to cancer and practically all other forms of tumors which affect man. Therefore, we have learned more about the inheritability of cancer from studying mice than we ever will learn from studying men.

There are strains of mice that are very prone to develop cancer. There are other strains that rarely develop it and cannot be inoculated with it. This inheritability relates to the strain of mice and to the strain of cancer.

The age at which cancer develops in mice is inherited, as well as the frequency with which it develops. The laws of inheritance relating to frequency of cancer and those relating to the age at which it develops are not the same.

Mice can be divided into three groups: Those with high cancer rates, medium cancer rates, and low cancer rates. As a rule those with high cancer rates also develop cancer early, but as has been said, the laws of inheritance are not the same.

The tendency to form secondary cancers in certain organs is inherited. For instance, a cancer which tends to reappear as a secondary growth in certain organs, will have the same characteristics when it appears in later generations. This is well recognized in certain human cancers.

Exercise on Awakening.

H. H. writes: "I have noticed your advice to those who wished to improve their form and carriage; with straighten up the shoulders and make the chest more prominent."

"As I have gone through the experience and know how to do it promptly and, effectively, I recommend my method for any one who has the ambition to employ the same method that I employ."

"On awakening in the morning take in a long and full breath and, without a moment's delay, spring out of bed and straighten up and throw your arms back and the chest forward with all the energy one possesses and exhale slowly."

"Repeat this every morning till it seems natural to stand and walk with the shoulders back and the chest forward."

"If one is not in dead earnest about straightening up, there will be no use in trying. At the age of 19 I went through this method and experience, and no straighter man could be found. It became perfectly natural to stand and walk with the shoulders thrown back and the chest protruding."

Bedbugs and Syphilis.

R. C. F. writes: "I am sleeping in a room which was previously occupied by one with syphilis."

"Now, of course, the bed and bed clothes have been changed, but there are quite a few bedbugs in the room."

"Is it possible that these bugs fed on the venereal germ, and if they bite me, could I be infected?"

REPLY: I know of no evidence that bedbugs spread syphilis. Kill them for other reasons.

Climbing the Stairs O. K.

Mrs. H. L. writes: "Could or would climbing the stairs many times a day affect the heart? I am 51, in good health, have no ailment to speak of."

REPLY: It will not, assuming that you have no valvular leak.

On the other hand, it is good for your heart.

Some people with valvular leaks need to climb stairs. Others are harmed by it.
