Forsling Not Present.
 A telegram was received from Gen. John J. Forsling expressing regret at being unable to attend the rites and stating that he "could not let the occasion pass without renewed expression of personal pride in the great state of Nebraska and expressing satisfaction in the fact that the cornerstone laying was dedicated to the patriotic and sacrifice of the men who fought and died to maintain Lincoln's great conception of human liberty."

Col. Presson, who has seen the cornerstones laying for three capitols of Nebraska, called upon Almighty God in his invocation, grant that we may never forget that the building to be erected on this foundation is dedicated to the men who in times, when the safety of our nation was threatened unselfishly gave themselves a willing sacrifice for their country."

McKelvie Gives Address.
 Governor McKelvie in his address said that "we meet today to lay the cornerstone of the new state capitol and to render a fitting memorial to those who fell in the service of their country."

"In the edifice to be erected," he continued, "it is conceived that the capitol of a state is the outward sign of the character of its people."
 "It is the belief that this conception symbolizes Nebraska, highway of progress, provider of man's necessities, battleground of freedom, distributor of learning, home of the volunteer."

Colonel Owsley told of the wonderful work done by the American Legion in Nebraska.

Celebration Is Held.
 After the rites, the city of Lincoln and visitors turned themselves over to a gala day of celebration.

At 1, luncheon was served at the Chamber of Commerce in honor of the capitol commission and invited guests.

At 2:45, addresses were delivered in the city auditorium by Colonel Owsley and State Legion Commander J. Ed C. Fisher.

At 4, there was a public reception in honor of the national and state commanders of the legion at the legion club rooms. Refreshments were served by the legion auxiliary.

In the evening, there was a big free dance at the legion headquarters by the American Legion.

Nation Honors Heroes Who Died in World War

President Harding Places Wreath on Unknown Soldier's Tomb With Simple Ceremony.

 also had come to honor a dead comrade again.
 The president stepped forward bareheaded and took from his military aide the great wreath of red and white and blue blossoms brought from the White House. The two secretaries stood hat in hand as he walked to the great stone and set the wreath gently against it. As he drew back to pause a moment looking down at the tomb he slowly raised his hand in military salute. Then he turned away.

 No word had been spoken save the military command. Even the signs that brought the cars rolling back were given by gesture and there was not a sound from the hundreds gathered to witness the brief ceremony.
 Mr. Harding and his cabinet members stood in a low toned talk as they waited for the cars. Then with a final salute from the troops they rolled away and the dying clatter of the cavalry escort left the spectators to drift slowly homeward, and the unknown to the keeping of the peaceful hills about him.
 But America's share in Armistice day events was not confined to those at home. The dead in France were not forgotten, nor was there lack of American fellowship at the great ceremonial in Brussels, where the Belgian unknown, perhaps among the first to fall in the great war, was entombed amid scenes such as those that witnessed the hero of Great Britain and France and Italy and America did their hero dead.

Messages to Belgians.
 For the American army, regular, reserve and national guardsmen, Secretary Weeks sent a message to the Belgian minister of war.
 "On behalf of the members of the army of the United States, I offer homage to their former comrade, the unknown Belgian soldier."
 General Pershing sent a personal message to the Belgian chief of staff.
 As formally expressing the comradeship of the American government in tribute to the Belgian unknown, President Harding has approved a citation which will be bestowed with the congressional medal of honor, the highest American recognition of valor by Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen, commanding American forces in Germany and specially ordered to Brussels for the purpose.
 At the eight American cemeteries in France, Belgium and England, there remain the bodies of 30,343 soldiers, sailors and marines who gave their lives during the war. At each of these, from the Meuse-Argonne, Aisne-Marne, Suresnes, St. Mihiel, the Somme, One-Mont in France, in Flanders field in Belgium and at Brookwood in England, appropriate services were held throughout the day and with American diplomatic or military and naval officers paying tribute.

 At home in the national cemeteries in New York and San Francisco, and at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., where many war dead from France are buried, there also were public expressions during the day but to the 32,672 brought home for burial in private cemeteries, the nation's gratitude was expressed by President Harding at Arlington.

In France.
 Paris, Nov. 11.—(By A. P.)—Let each of us remember today the emotion which shook him when he learned the news," read the Armistice day message of Marshal Joffre.
 "Every year the fete of November 11 to ought to echo that hallowed hour when the people learned as never before, what fatherland means," his message, published in the Echo de Paris, says. "Tempered against by this memory, it should give us a horror of selfishness, barren quarrels and demoralizing pessimism."
 In the afternoon Marshal Foch, Earl Haig, who was commander in chief of the British armies in France and Belgium, and Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, wartime British sea lord, stood again on the spot in the Compiègne forest where the armistice was signed. There the chief magistrate will unveil a monument, marking for all time the place where the German eagle fell.

 fic, should be no lower than necessary to meet existing competition, should not threaten the extinction of legitimate competition by water carriers and should not impose undue burdens on other traffic or endanger the transcontinental roads' ability to earn proper returns.
Conditions Not Met.
 The applications of the railroads in question, the commission held, did not fix rates which met these conditions and consequently they were denied. The commission's authority is exerted under the fourth section of the commerce act which forbids railroads charging higher rates for short distances over identical routes, unless the commission approves the practice in any given case.

Bootleggers Who Evade Taxes to Be Rounded Up

Liquor Law Violators Who Make False Returns to Be Fined in Intensive Drive.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Tax-evading bootleggers, who have amassed wealth selling illicit booze, are being rounded up in one of the most persistent drives ever begun by the internal revenue bureau. The government is slaying many millions of dollars in revenue because bootleggers have failed to make returns showing their income.

A new system devised by the bureau has put the government on the tracks of tax dodgers of this class. The "Big Fours" and other similarly designated cliques that have a monopoly on the booze supply and distribution in the larger cities, are being caught rapidly through information supplied by prohibition agents.

In one large city discovery was made that the chief of police, city councilmen and other dignitaries were active members of the bootleg combination. Examination of their bank accounts disclosed fabulous sums accumulated suddenly from liquor profits. Investigation shows that in practically every case these taxpayers failed to account for their income from liquor sources.

Records seized by prohibition agents all over the country have led to sensational disclosures involving high officials. They are actively participating in the profits on big deals. In many cities, prohibition officials declared, local officials count upon a certain stipulated rakeoff on all liquor transactions.

One of the so-called kings of bootleggers, who made a phenomenal rise as a financier, has been discovered with a possible indebtedness to the government so large that almost his entire fortune may be wiped out if the government collects all of the penalties and taxes assessed against him. In this case his liability has been multiplied many times through the past two years by failure to report his true income, for falsifying his tax statement, and withholding taxes on liquor made and sold.

In its pursuit of the tax evaders in bootleg ranks the internal revenue bureau is slapping on the maximum penalties. These are very severe.
