MAKE EVERY TAX DOLLAR WORK.
State-wide organization of a Taxpayers League is forecasted in a dispatch from Aurora.

It is not enough merely to elect new men to office or to have extracted new pledges from old officials. The people have to stay on the job.

Some critics of government declare that it now costs a dollar to get 50 cents' worth of public work done. Many will say that this is an exaggeration.

From the top to the bottom of our governmental divisions there are men elected to office who are not called upon to do any real work but who follow the custom of appointing a deputy to handle affairs.

A state meeting to form a permanent taxpayers' organization has been called for December 11 in Hastings.

The fact to be held in mind in carrying on this campaign for lower taxes is that no reduction should be carried far enough to cripple the service of government to the people.

UNCLE SAM PAYS THE FREIGHT.
Comptroller McHard, who was transferred from Broken Bow to Washington, seems to have been a good investment for the government.

Neither the army nor the navy should be held responsible for the doings in Philadelphia that stirred the indignation of the Washington official visitors.

In Russia eight men convicted of swindling the government in the construction of an electrical plant on the Volga have been sentenced to death.

A joint debate between the Tiger of France and the outgoing democratic senator from Nebraska might draw a crowd, whether it settled anything or not.

Mr. Bryan, however, will not be generally regarded as a rival to either Cupid or Hymen.

There are three ways of teaching:
1. By imitation—We imitate overt acts of others, such as walking, talking and gesturing.

When it is recalled that in all large shipping centers experts are continually at work, examining freight bills to determine if their clients are being overcharged, the dilemma of the government may be understood.

IOWANS KNOW A GOOD THING.
The business of paying the soldier bonus, ordered by the people at the last election is taking definite form in Iowa.

KNOWING NEBRASKA.

A recent editorial in these columns, relating to the ignorance of Nebraskans, has been reprinted with approving comments in so many Nebraska newspapers, that The Omaha Bee is impelled to mention the subject again.

How many Nebraskans know that one of the largest music publishing houses in America is located at York, or that the compositions of its owner and manager, Prof. J. A. Parks, are more widely sung by choirs and choruses than the works of any other living composer?

There are some queer things in Nebraska, too. In Carter canyon, Scottsbluff county, are a dozen cottonwood trees, and the late Prof. Bessey declared that they were the only known cottonwoods of their species on the North American continent.

Champions of the Klan in Kansas claim that this organization does not sanction such outrages, and therefore should not be judged in that light.

Here in Wichita you will find many members of the Klan. No one would dare to tell you that they belong to it.

For eight years the United States had a schoolmaster in the White House, and congress smarted at times under his reproof.

Governor Ferris has been pretty busy in politics, for he is one of the few surviving democrats in Michigan, and in his home district they have to run him for something almost every election in order to fill out the ticket.

Primarily, he is a schoolmaster; he took up that profession when but 16 years of age, over half a century ago, and still pursues it as his vocation.

His record as governor during the great copper mine strike in the northern peninsula is an earnest of what may be looked for when he gets into the senate.

Every consumer of coal could be expected to agree that the price charged on delivery is high enough.

The Klan Ouster.
The ouster suit brought in the summer against the Ku Klux Klan in Kansas is a sufficiently strong legal indictment of the organization, and will have a very important bearing on the future developments regarding the Klan.

At the same time legal proceedings are being taken in Louisiana against John M. Parker of Louisiana in taking a decisive stand. His indictment tells of outrages being perpetrated in Louisiana by masked members of the Klan.

Champions of the Klan in Kansas claim that this organization does not sanction such outrages, and therefore should not be judged in that light.

"THE PEOPLE'S VOICE"

Praises Policy of the Bee.
Omaha.—To the Editor of The Bee: The editorial in Monday's Bee relative to the legislative committee is an admirable statement of what the people of Nebraska want their legislators to do to promote good government.

There are different kinds of prejudices. There is the party prejudice, which approves of anything that the party may see fit to do.

We live in a democracy, imperfect indeed, but it arouses higher ideals than under autocratic government.

It should be remembered, however, that taking passengers is a risky business. The greatest risk is incurred by the owner of the car for damages.

One Nice Little Woman.
From the Chicago Evening Post.
Women are indeed hard to please. When a man says one of their number: "She is a nice little woman."

Advice to the Tiger.
Pueblo, Colo.—To the Editor of The Omaha Bee: Clemenceau, the Tiger of France, came to pay us a visit and as a private French citizen the American people extend to him a hearty welcome.

Recent events in Europe prove their wisdom and foresight to stay out of the mess. He wants to frighten us with the old story about Germany's new war—who is the most militaristic nation in Europe today?

The Turk was dead and driven out of Europe and the hope of centuries of all Christendom was nearly realized. Who invited them back to dictate the policies of the Dardanelles?

Women's Common Sense.
That woman who instructed spellbinders of her sex "when you have nothing more to say, shut your mouth" should be hired to coach a lot of men orators.

"In Times of Peace."
Patrician of Ancient Rome—By the way, Marcellus, of good wife's relatives are journeying to Rome to visit us. Do you happen to know of a good reliable assassin?—Life.

A Book of Today

"Penelope's Problems," by Dorothy Castleton, published by the Fogg Company, Boston, has those elements which make it a fascinating book for girls, especially of flapper age.

"The Heart of Little Shikara," acclaimed the best short story of 1921. It is the little drudge in the home of her uncle and aunt, and their selfish, spoiled daughter, Evelyn.

"Safety in Numbers."
Maud—it seems terrible, doesn't it, for a young girl of 18 to marry a man of 70.

WORDS OF GREAT MEN.
Words of great men ring, and thrill us, With a heartful melody, And their deeds with which they fill us, Seem to linger constantly.

Prohibition Commissioner Hayden says the nation is "dry as a bone."
