Problems That Perplex

By Beatrice Fairfax.

Doll Hospital.
Dear Miss Fairfax: Could you through the columns of your paper give the address of any firm in Omaha where I may obtain arms for doll bodies?

I have quite a few good bodies on hand that could be fitted up for poor kiddies if I could get pretty hands somewhere. I would send an addressed envelope, but I am sure there must be many mothers who would like to know about doll repairs, for many of us are too far from any large city to shop in person. Yours very truly,
MRS. E.

Write to the Dolly Hospital, 203 Gardner building, Omaha.

Miss Straight: Surely there is something wrong somewhere, my dear. There are any number of fine young men of good moral character. Perhaps you are just a little too prudish, or it may be that you are not meeting the right sort.

Almost Beautiful: Personality is what you lack, my dear. It is not always the pretty girl who is popular. From your letter I gather that you are not a "good mixer," while on the other hand your charm is bright and clever, and no doubt is at her best when she is in a crowd.

The Sergeant: If you will send me your name and address I will run the letter and forward any replies to you. Your name, of course, will not appear in my column.

Golden Rod: You can get information desired at the public library.

President Doctors' Wives' Club

Mrs. W. G. Dishong

CHAPTER XIII.
The Game of "I See."
Tommy Fox had plenty of cousins of his own age who lived near him in the pasture, next the woods. These youngsters had many a frolic together. Sometimes they played hide-and-seek. Sometimes they pretended to hunt one another. Sometimes they did this; sometimes they did that.

Now, everybody knows that all games become tiresome if played too much. So one evening when Tommy Fox told his cousins that he would teach them a new game, they were delighted.

"What's it called?" they asked him. "I see," said Tommy Fox. "And this is the way you play it: I'll say, 'I see a dog running.' And then I'll

"I see a dog running!" he cried. And off he dashed. "Come back! Come back!" all his cousins barked after him. "You must wait your turn." But the fellow never stopped. "Let him go!" said somebody. "It's a good joke on him. He thinks we're following him."

The Fox cousins stilled at one another. And the one whose turn it really was cried, "I see a fish swimming!"

But nobody paid the slightest heed to him. At that moment Tommy Fox exclaimed, "Run! Run! Here's old dog Spot!"

There was a great scattering then. The cousins went bounding away in every direction. Some ran into the woods. Some scurried over the hill. Others headed for Cedar Swamp.

As for Tommy he hurried down to the farmyard. "Old dog Spot will be busy for an hour. This is a good time to get a hen," he thought.

He got his hen. And going home, later, he met the cousin who had cried, "I see a dog running!" "You played out of turn," Tommy told him.

"What do you mean?" asked the slow-witted cousin. "When you called, 'I see a dog running,' it wasn't your turn."

"But I wasn't playing. I did see a dog running. I saw old Spot coming across the pasture. It's a dangerous game, just as I said."

Tommy Fox had to admit that his cousin was right.

My Marriage Problems

Adela Garrison's New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife."

How Madge Carefully Played Her Part for Dicky.

There was in Dicky's eyes as he came up to me under the station light a look which, I imagine, every wife receives at some time or other from her life partner, when he knows he has almost exhausted her patience. But even through the tenseness of the moment it reminded me irresistibly of the expression I had seen in the eyes of mischievous schoolboys who, upon facing the teacher, were not quite sure just what fate was to be meted out to them.

I knew that he was absolutely uncertain as to my mood. His imagination, always lively, must have pictured me reading the morning papers with his bizarre accounts of his escapade. It was humiliating reading for any wife, and he must have told himself that my grievance would be augmented by the fact that I had had no suspicion of Claire Foster's proximity to his social horizon.

He had left home to go to the Adirondack camp of the "best-selling" author whose work he was to illustrate, and since then—save for a hurried, perfunctory note—I had received no word of him. His beseeching telegram had brought me to him, but I was sure that he had counted upon my sense of conjugal duty, inherited from my Puritan ancestors, rather than upon my affection, when he dispatched it.

"How Is Claire?"

All in all, I told myself a bit grimly, my Peter Pan was facing realities.

Bazar Tonight at Lady of Lourdes Parish Hall

An electric washer, an electric vacuum cleaner and 25-piece set of silver will be offered as door prizes at the Christmas bazar of Our Lady of Lourdes parish, held at the parish hall, Thirty-second and Francis streets, last night, and to be held again tonight.

Three sodalities will be represented at the bazar. The men articles have charge of a country store. The young ladies' sodality, headed by Miss Sue Moriarty, have dressed dolls and the married women's organization will offer a wide selection of jellies, jams and home-made cakes.

Rev. Stephen L. Dowd, parish pastor, is directing his energy into making the first Christmas bazar of the parish a success.

The parish aid society of Trinity church will conduct a sale of hand-made novelties and useful articles at the Trinity parish house Saturday, opening at 10 a. m. Home cooked foods will be a feature of the bazar.

In connection with the sale the women's auxiliary will serve a luncheon at noon at the parish house.

The women of St. Margaret Mary's parish will conduct a Christmas sale of hand-made articles at the school, Fiftyeth and California streets, this evening.

At St. Phillip Nerl church of Florence there will be a card party Saturday afternoon at 2:30, in connection with the Christmas bazar.

To Have Xmas Guests.

Mrs. George Thummel is expecting her father, George E. Congdon, of Rochester, N. Y., and her brother, Lyman Allen Congdon and Mrs. Congdon, to be her guests for the Christmas holidays. A number of affairs will be given in their honor.

Engagement Tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Shafton announce the engagement of their daughter, Rose Louise, to Harry A. Frankel, son of Mrs. S. Frankel, of Rock Island, Ill. On Sunday afternoon from 3 until 5 and Sunday evening from 8 until 10 Mr. and Mrs. Shafton will receive their friends in honor of their daughter.
