Reluctant to Marry.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been going about with a girl of 22 for eight months. I gave her an engagement ring. She set the date for the wedding, but now she tells me she does not want to get married yet. All my asking and pleading for a reason for this sudden change have been in vain. My fiancée assures me there is nothing wrong. Hundreds of times my fiancée assured me in letters during the summer that she loves me dearly and wishes to marry me, yet when the time draws near she seems to have a certain fear she does not know herself.

You have probably put your finger on the crux of the matter when you say that "she seems to have a certain fear she does not know herself." Some girls do feel a terror of marriage even though they love the man to whom they are pledged. A terror of the unknown, a wonder where their great adventure will lead. Try to be gentle and patient and to set her fears at rest. Teach her that your love will protect her. Perhaps your mother could do a great deal to smooth the way for both of you.

Misplaced Admiration.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 19 and considered attractive. There is only one man I care for, and I love him desperately. But, he is married. He has promised to get a divorce and marry me, but he has never done so. I know that it is impossible for me

My Marriage Problems

Adele Carlson's New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife."

The Way Madge "Opened Fire" on Mrs. Barker.

I looked curiously at the lighted house before which we had drawn up, the house which held Claire Foster, and in which I instinctively felt I would be compelled to act warily if I were to avoid a scene.

It was evidently a summer hotel of the remodelled up-state farmhouse type, and upon its broad front veranda were several women swathed in heavy wraps, ostensibly enjoying the moonlight upon the distant mountains.

That some of them were genuinely indifferent to my arrival, I knew, for the guests at a mountain resort in the late fall are generally autumn lovers, and pay no attention to anything else save the delights of the Indian summer. But I was sure from the furrowed brows of two of the women nearest the door that they had been watching for my arrival, and anticipating the pleasurable prospect of a possible exciting row.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been going about with a girl of 22 for eight months. I gave her an engagement ring. She set the date for the wedding, but now she tells me she does not want to get married yet. All my asking and pleading for a reason for this sudden change have been in vain. My fiancée assures me there is nothing wrong. Hundreds of times my fiancée assured me in letters during the summer that she loves me dearly and wishes to marry me, yet when the time draws near she seems to have a certain fear she does not know herself.

Meeting His Friends.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been going about with a young man a year and have consented to become engaged to him Christmas. I have never been introduced to any of his people. My parents say I shouldn't become engaged to him until I meet them, as it is odd that he doesn't ask me to. I don't know what to do, as I don't know if it would be proper for me to ask, as I'd much rather the invitation come directly from him. MAY.

They Hate Rubbers!

The youngsters DON'T like to wear rubbers. Mothers talk less children forget. There is a way to forestall any danger and protect the children from their own thoughtlessness. The Elite Shoe Renewal is a first class safeguard against catching cold. Being the children's shoes to us and leave them with instructions to remake them. We'll sew up the ripped seams, put on new soles (half or full) and heels, mend torn linings and generally restore the shape and style of the shoe.

Organists of City to Meet Dupre

Invitations have been issued to city organists by the Y. W. C. A. for a luncheon to meet Marcel Dupre, Notre Dame organist, who will appear here Tuesday, December 19, in concert at the First Central Congregational church under Y. W. C. A. auspices. Invitations are complimentary and are going to the organists of the city. The Organists' Guild will be included and Dr. R. Mills Sibby has been consulted for further names. Any organist omitted is asked to telephone the Y. W. C. A.

Girdles with long fringes hanging at the sides are good. So are those that consist of a wide band about the hips, laced together loosely at the front in a decorative manner.

"Come this way!" cried Mrs. Fox to Tommy when old Spot saw them and barked. "Follow me!" To Tommy's amazement, his mother didn't dash into the woods. Instead, they leaped the fence out of the back pasture. Below them the fields dropped down into the river bottom. Off to their right stood the farm buildings. Ahead of them the cows dawdled along near the bars that opened into the lane.

KELLOGG'S

Corn Flakes you ever ate!

Takes the rough edges off hopping out of the covers these snappy mornings just thinking about that lousy bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes waiting down-stairs! Big and brown and crispy-crunchy flakes—a revelation in appetizing flavor, wonderful in wholesome goodness—the most delicious cereal you ever tasted!

Instantly you like Kellogg's, not only because of appealing flavor, but because Kellogg's are not "leathery"! Kellogg's are a delight to eat, as the little folks as well as the big ones will tell you! And Kellogg's ought to be best—they're the original Corn Flakes! You have only to make comparison to realize that quickly!

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

TOMMY FOX, ADVENTURER

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XVIII.
A Trick Worth Knowing.
It was almost milking time. Johnnie Green and old dog Spot had gone to the pasture to drive the cows home, and the Muley Cow was missing.
"She's jumped the fence again, into the back pasture," Johnnie told old dog Spot. So with Spot running on ahead, Johnnie Green started up the hill. And that was the reason why old Spot happened to visit the little wooded back pasture that afternoon.
Young trees—birches and spruce—dotted the back pasture, as well as clumps of ferns and berry bushes. It was not easy to find a cow that strayed there. Though Johnnie and Spot looked everywhere, they couldn't see the Muley Cow.
At last Spot barked. Johnnie Green, a little way from him, heard his barks and exclaimed, "He's found her!"
But Spot hadn't found the Muley Cow. He had stumbled upon something far more interesting than that staid creature. He had found two foxes—an old one and a young one.

It was Mrs. Fox and her son, Tommy, that Spot had surprised. He headed downhill, straight for the pasture where the herd of cows was moving slowly towards the bars, and barked. "Follow me!"
"Watch sharp," she said, "and you'll learn a trick that may be of use to you some day."
When Mrs. Fox smiled Tommy knew that she was not frightened. When she spoke about a trick, he knew that she could be making no mistake. So he ran gayly beside her. They leaped the fence out of the back pasture. Below them the fields dropped down into the river bottom. Off to their right stood the farm buildings. Ahead of them the cows dawdled along near the bars that opened into the lane.

"Faster, Jimmy, faster! You know mother and there won't be any breakfast till we bring the Kellogg's Corn Flakes!"

pausing to snatch tempting grass tufts now and then or clover tops. "Aren't you making a mistake, mother?" Tommy asked as he bounded along by his mother's side.
Mrs. Fox actually smiled. And that was something she seldom did when a dog was following her.
"Watch sharp," she said, "and you'll learn a trick that may be of use to you some day."
When Mrs. Fox smiled Tommy knew that she was not frightened. When she spoke about a trick, he knew that she could be making no mistake. So he ran gayly beside her. Mrs. Fox and her puzzled son drew nearer and nearer to the cattle. Then they dashed into the herd and ran in and out among the wondering cows.
At last Mrs. Fox dived right under a cow that stood on the edge of the herd beside the brook. She leaped down into the brook, followed it upstream a little way, then turned and doubled back toward the woods.
Tommy followed her every move. As they reached the upper end of the pasture they could hear old Spot still barking. He was down below, scurrying about in frantic haste among the cows.
Mrs. Fox smiled grimly as she looked at her son and spoke. "That's the trick," she said. "There's no better way to hide your scent from a dog. Old Spot will never find ours among these cows."
And then she led Tommy into the woods.
