

Happy New Year

Mrs. R. Beecher Howell Honors School Set.

Honoring the Misses Katherine and Eleanor Baxter, Nancy Hulst and Eleanor Scott, Mrs. R. Beecher Howell gave a luncheon at the Blackstone Saturday. Covers were placed for Mrs. Howell and the four honor guests and Misses Margaret Eastman, Jean Palmer, Ann Young, Charlotte Smith, Daisy Rich, Betty Paxton, Laura Richardson, Katherine Dooley and Julia Caldwell.

Miss Ruth Ingalls and Miss Lyman Allan Congdon

With her hand on the knocker, Miss Josephine Schurman was snapped as she called on a friend to bid goodby to the old year and wish good luck for the new. Miss Schurman, in her first year at Smith college, is spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. E. A. Pegau. Mrs. Lyman Allan Congdon of Syracuse, N. Y., is the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Thummel. Tonight Mrs. Thummel is entertaining at a buffet party in honor of her and of Mr. Congdon. Miss Ruth Constance Ingalls of Atchison, Kan., is one of the guests who are the subject of so much social attention during this gala time. Miss Ingalls is visiting Maj. and Mrs. Arthur Davis. Besides being charming she is out of the ordinary in her accomplishments. She speaks French fluently, having received part of her schooling in Paris. Mrs. A. I. Root has just returned from several months in Europe and is now busily making preparations to move to California with her husband and two sons. She is, however, giving much of her few weeks here to her friends. On Friday evening she and Mr. Root were honor guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. George Brandeis at their home. They will spend New Year's day with relatives.

Miss A. I. Root

Exclusive to Fred Stone Company to Exclusion Entertain at a Benefit Supper Party, Jan. 15

By GABBY DETAILS. EXCLUSIVENESS to exclusion, might be the title of a little story which could be told of two Omaha girls. They were both in Paris this summer. One saw a black velvet model at Jenny's and immediately had a copy made for herself. The other saw the black velvet model at Jenny's and purchased it instantly. Each content in the exclusiveness her gown launched forth to a holiday tea. They met. They gasped. They were defeated.

A tip-top affair in two senses of the word will be given in Omaha the night of January 15. The entire Fred Stone company, opening that night at the Brandeis theater for a three-day run of their popular musical show, "Tip Top" will, following the performance, be guests at the Brandeis restaurants where they will provide entertainment at a benefit supper party for the crippled children's home of the Society for the Relief of the Disabled. Mrs. Louis Clarke and Mrs. Barton Millard are directing the benefit supper party. Mrs. Joseph Barker has charge of the tables, though reservations should be made directly to the Brandeis restaurants. Miss Claire Daugherty will arrange for the sale of cigars. The entire 10th floor of the Brandeis restaurants will be turned over to the society for this occasion. Proceeds from the cover charge of $1 will go toward the maintenance of the Hattie B. Monroe home. There are 12 crippled children there now and 170 altogether are being cared for throughout the city. Last summer a recreation camp was maintained there; it has now been placed on a permanent basis.

The music department of the Omaha Woman's club will give a musical tea Friday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. auditorium. The program which will be given under direction of Mrs. James Hanley will include harp selections, by Thelma Skeen; song group, Mrs. Harry O. Steel, accompanied by Mrs. Walter Silver; violin solos, Mrs. Jean Underland Ryan, accompanied by Mrs. Gail White; McMoines; song group, Walter Wheatley, accompanied by Mrs. Willis Redfield, with violin obligato by Mrs. Underland. The affair is open to the public.

Tonight's New Year's Frolic Will Be the Gayest of All

From the number of reservations made at the clubs and restaurants for the last mad frolic of the old year the New Year will enter auspiciously despite the fact that it falls on Sunday. In fact it will be perhaps a bit gay because there is a day of rest ahead of the annual festivities as well as afterwards. At the Omaha club 300 reservations, the full capacity, had been made by Friday for the supper which is to be served at 11 o'clock. The Athletic club on Saturday had over 1,000 reservations. The Fontenelle had made 600 reservations and were ready to accommodate many more. There are to be three orchestras in the hotel and cabaret entertainment. Supper in both the Athletic club and the Fontenelle is to be served at 10 o'clock and in all three places dancing starts at 12:01. In the Athletic club, there are to be orchestras in the gymnasium and on the main floor. There will be cabaret entertainment at the hotel and three orchestras playing in the lobby and in all the dining rooms. Among the parties at the Omaha club will be one given by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Paxton in honor of Miss Eleanor Scott of Washington, D. C., guest of Miss Daisy Rich. The other guests include the Misses Charlotte Smith, Julia Caldwell, Natalie Hastings and Betty Paxton and Messrs. William Coppock of Council Bluffs, Baldwin St. Clair, William Clark, Chilton Waldo, Edwin Fry and George Hulst. Dining together following the performance at the Orpheum will be the Messrs. and Mesdames W. J. Foye, George R. Prinz, W. A. C. Johnson, Walter W. Head, Frank Judson, Joseph Barker, Mrs. Margaret Hynes and Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Hull. W. Farnam Smith will have as his guests Mr. and Mrs. David Baum, Margaret Baum, Mr. J. M. Baldrige, Randall Brown, Miss Butler, Mrs. W. S. Poppleton, Mrs. Harold Keller. With Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Luikart

"N-O-O, I didn't think there's a Santy Claus," said a little crippled fellow at one of the hospitals where good Old St. Nick visited this year. He was flushed and talkative under the excitement of candy and oranges and presents. "I useta look fer 'im at home on Crismus but he never came, so course I thought there wasn't any Santy Claus. "But there is!" he said in his thin voice, wondering perhaps why Santa visited hospitals and not homes. At another hospital where good deeds were being done, a child who had just received a lovely gift looked up into "dear old Santa's" face and asked: "Do you go to the western part of the state. "Yes," he replied somewhat mystified. Whisking the wrapping around the gift, she handed it back to Santa Claus with these words: "Please take this to my mother."

"WILL you and Mr. K. come over this evening and play bridge," Mrs. L. graciously asked over the telephone a few days ago. "We haven't an engagement," Mrs. K. frankly admitted, "but it wouldn't be quite convenient to get from us to you," she said, "because son G. is using the car this evening." A laugh at the other end of the wire. "To be honest where honesty is due," the initial bidder confessed, "that's just why we are remaining at home this week. He is home from school and is using our car every night this week and we are trying to make the evenings more bearable by inviting in friends. But they all give your excuse! Guess we'll have to call up some childless couple." "These are the elders staying at home, lashed to the mast as it were, while their offspring spring off with the family conveyances.

"Heb, heb!" he seemed to be saying. "So it's come to dis, has it, lady? Saay, I knowed it would. We'll did dese guys expect of a machine without no brains? I'd like tuh see my boss if I pulled dat stuff. Criminy! I wish I had a tin hide 'n' a brass radiator, 'n' I'd sure try it, Bally, huh? Why doncha giv'n his nose bag? Twenty horse-power? Don't make me laugh, lidd; honest, I gotta cracked rib. Well, here I go again. So long lady, I hope you miss your train."

WONDER what a horse thinks about when he sees an automobile that won't run. This important piece of animal psychology was forcibly called to Gabby's mind recently when the car she was intending to ride in refused to start. It was parked on one of the downtown streets, and she looked up to see a junk wagon standing nearby with an old bay bag of bones attached to it. The horse had turned to look over his shoulder at the delinquent machine. If the look in his eye was not ghoulish it was at least gloating. He pulled his lathered lips back over his yellow teeth in an unpleasant smile. "Heb, heb!" he seemed to be saying. "So it's come to dis, has it, lady? Saay, I knowed it would. We'll did dese guys expect of a machine without no brains? I'd like tuh see my boss if I pulled dat stuff. Criminy! I wish I had a tin hide 'n' a brass radiator, 'n' I'd sure try it, Bally, huh? Why doncha giv'n his nose bag? Twenty horse-power? Don't make me laugh, lidd; honest, I gotta cracked rib. Well, here I go again. So long lady, I hope you miss your train."

Honored at Many Holiday Affairs

Miss Mary Morsman, her guest, Miss Dorothy Gilbert of New York, and Miss Jean Palmer have been renewing friendships this week begun when they were students together at St. Timothy's school in Catonsville, Md. Miss Morsman and Miss Palmer are now at Bryn Mawr and Miss Gilbert has been graduated from Vassar. During the last week Miss Gilbert has been honored at a great many parties. Tomorrow evening she will be complimented with a dinner and the Orpheum, and Tuesday Miss Claire Daugherty will be her hostess at dinner preceding the dances given by Miss Gertrude Kountze and Catherine Cartan, and by the D. C. Bradfords for their daughters.

"Book of Job" Is of Universal Appeal

The "Book of Job" which Stuart Walker is offering at the Brandeis in January under the auspices of the Drama League has the unique distinction of being the only theatrical attraction that has the universal support of all religious denominations. Hebrews, Catholics, Protestants and Scientists are unanimous in their enthusiasm, endorsements and co-operation. Nor is this strange when one delves into the philosophy contained in this great Biblical drama. "Job" appeals to all classes of people. Its intense emotional qualities, the flashes of satire, wit and humor, the angry outbursts of passions, the all human characteristics and universal experiences of the characters in the play, the dramatic climaxes, and the spectacular beauty hold one spell-bound from beginning to end. Audiences rarely applaud. But they leave the theater marvelling at the sublimity of the play. Yet, the "Book of Job," though deeply spiritual, is not a "church" drama. It is no less dramatic than other great masterpieces such as "Faust," "Macbeth" or "Hamlet." It is taken almost literally from the Bible; but it merely happens no one knows why, since it has no relation to the chronology of the Bible or Hebrew history, that in the Bible has been included the greatest poem of all literature. Stuart Walker has not changed or added to it. He has simply taken it as he found it, one of the Biblical Archives, reduced to a suitable length and graphically presented it to the world in a living and never to be forgotten form. It is said to be impossible for one to witness this dramatization and regard Job thereafter merely as a traditional Biblical character. And no one can see it without being stimulated to a deeper consciousness of the Divine in human affairs and the spiritual powers given to man to survive and triumph over the physical obstacles and sufferings of life.

Mary Mallory Harris Introduced on Saturday.

Bob Millard entertained at luncheon Saturday at the Brandeis tea room in honor of Miss Mary Mallory Harris of Memphis, Tenn., who arrived that morning to be the guest of her fiancé, Denman Kountze. In the evening Miss Claire Daugherty gave a dinner for Miss Harris.

Reservations, which are open to the public, may be made with any member of the house and home committee, Mrs. John R. Golden, chairman.

Kappa Delta Entertains.

Kappa Delta sorority entertained 12 couples at a dinner dance at the Athletic club Saturday evening.

"What Every Woman Knows"

Mrs. Carroll Belden, Mrs. Alan McDonald and Mrs. Milo T. Gates are wives of members of the entertainment committee for the University club. They "retire from office" with the tea dance and buffet supper at the club New Year's day. Dr. Robert Schrock and E. J. Preps are members of the committee with Messrs. Belden, McDonald and Gates. They admit in a harmonious quartet that they themselves have planned all the social events of the year and originated all ideas in connection therewith. The charming wives make no refutation nor need they, for without a word on their part there are things that "every woman knows" about man's independence in managing social affairs.
