

Pajamas Minus Sleeves Latest Fad in London

Leather Sport Skirts of Gorgeous Hues Demanded—Handbag and Gauntlet Gloves Must Match.

London, Jan. 6.—Sleeveless pajamas and nightdresses are the latest in fashionable women's wear among the "haut ton" of Britain.

In place of sleeves, the wearer adorns her arms with dainty bracelets of rosebuds and ribbon, usually worn above the elbow.

This accomplished, the fashionable Englishwoman is now turning her attention to an "all suede" out-of-door costume.

Having borrowed from man his leather waistcoat and fashioned it into the most fascinating of jerkins, velvety soft and of the most gorgeous hues, she is now demanding sports skirts of the same material.

Not only hat and shoes, but handbag and gauntlet gloves must match exactly. And to achieve this result even fur is often so disguised as to be hardly recognizable.

Not only is the humble rabbit dyed blue, green and pink, according to the wearer's fancy or gown, but even the sumptuous chinchilla has been transformed to jade.

Evenings nowadays all English women are clad in gold or silver, like oldtime fairy princesses. Almost every material has now a metal thread interwoven, giving gorgeous and shimmering effects.

The very newest material for evening wear is a soft lemon crepe de chine, with a Japanese landscape of sea and mountains imprinted in black.

Wife, 20, Names Woman 82 Years Old as Rival

Mrs. Minnie C. Englehardt

By MARGERY REX. New York, Jan. 6.—Eighty-two years old and a correspondent in a divorce case!

Well, of course, we can't all become United States senators after 80. But, after all, the distinction which has befallen Mrs. H. J. Brayton of Providence, R. I., isn't anything she can really get conceited about.

There are 121 others so named in the divorce case of Mrs. Minnie Colwell Englehardt, aged 20, against her "love magnet" husband, Dr. Adolph Englehardt. The 122 rivals were so created through being "patients" of the healer. He has been engineering a spiritual contest, apparently, which his wife describes as "negligee" religion. She believes it has covered a multitude of sins.

At least it offered an all-embracing in a paper love emanating from the founder, Dr. Englehardt, familiarly known as the "love magnet." The Sunday-go-to-meeting devotional garments of his folk were kimonos, his "lavender-souled" wife asserts.

Those Penitential Robes. "He tried to turn my home into a harem," she cries. Mrs. Englehardt told the court that the "magnet's" divine cures were not so good when she was about the premises and that the molashades of the penitential robes hanging about his "office" got on her optic nerves.

Englehardt liked them younger when he fell in love with the lady who is now his wife. She was just 16, a high school student. It was love at first sight. Her parents had been caught by one of Englehardt's "ads" in a paper and were charmed with his healing claims. Daughter Minnie and her parents became patients.

In those days Englehardt was Dr. Adolph von Henri, and it was during the war at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., as an enemy alien. All his patients went to the train to kiss him good-bye, his wife states. When he regained his liberty he took the name by which he is now known. On January 24, 1920, he got married.

His subsequent conduct led Mrs. Englehardt to sue for divorce, charging non-support, gross misbehavior and wickedness and extreme cruelty. She says:

"I got tired of seeing women flock to him day and night. And I noticed his cures were not so good when I was around. "He certainly mesmerized the women. Young or old, it made no difference. And, furthermore, he is not an ordained minister. He used religious meetings as a cloak for his divine healing seance. "He kept a closet of multi-hued kimonos for his women patients that would put any lingerie store to shame. He had colors for different types. "Oh, he could certainly hoodwink us women!" Here are some of the correspondents named by Mrs. Englehardt out of 122 rivals: Mrs. Brayton, 82; Mrs. Charles Baas, 85; Mrs. Georgianna Gregg, 75; Mrs. Herbert Lawrence, Mrs. Anna J. Tanner, 65; Miss Alice Manning, who is in turn suing Mrs. Englehardt for naming her; Mrs. Nellie Silva, Mrs. Effie Ross, Mrs. Mary Parker, Miss Ida Angell, 42; Mrs. William Bennis, Mrs. Baxter, Miss Gardner, Miss Ingaborg Swanson, Mrs. Merrill and Miss Emma Nelson.

Woman Defends Male's Right to End Engagement

Birth Control Advocate Says Sexes Equal Before Law—Break Before Marriage Better Than After.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 6.—"Women have claimed and won equality with men before the law. They should grant men the same privilege of breaking the engagement that they have claimed and used."

That is the way Mrs. Margaret Sanger, birth control advocate, answered Marjorie Bowen, famous British novelist, who recently declared that men should be required to keep marriage engagements and women retain the right, under law, to sue for breach of promise damages.

Mrs. Sanger fired her answering broadside at the British writer while here to lecture before the Women's congress of Syracuse. "It is far better to break before than after marriage," warned Mrs. Sanger. "It is of the utmost importance for both that the man be madly in love with the girl. If he changes his mind, or if he learns that he has ceased to care, both are happier if he breaks it off. So far as legal action is concerned, I fall to see why the man should not have the same privilege that women frequently exercise. It hurts a woman's vanity—just that—to lose her fiance. It would hurt her far more to seek divorce."

Big Flood in Algeria

Bliska, Jan. 6.—A tremendous storm, followed by three days of very heavy rain, has occurred in Algeria, about 50 miles south of Bliska, in a district where no rain has fallen since 1917.

The railway between Bliska and Touggourt was washed away in five places. A train which left Bliska on Tuesday afternoon for Touggourt found itself in an immense lake covering some 60 square miles. After several narrow gorges had been swept off the rails, the train reached Bliska. In some places the track was 16 inches deep in water.
