one of the finest things that America has contributed to the art student and art lover. Gutzon Borglum has written a most interesting sketch of his brother's career and says that the early inspiration of his ranch life in western Nebraska colored his work and gave him a keen insight and sympathy with the animals of the plains which he portrayed. The first was a dog fight, the last unfinished piece done 28 years later, "Aspiration." He did not start the serious study of sculptured art until he was 28 years old and developed into a brilliant teacher of his craft. A copy of this wonderful book on sculpturing has been ordered for the library by an admirer of Solon Borglum's work.

Ever-Changing Color Themes Fascinating Lure of Eastern Rugs

OMBINING all the mysterious fascination of eastern legend with the unmistakable color qualities found only in the silk and wool dye pots of expert weavers, the rugs now displayed by Mr. Nahigian, ru gconnoisseur in the rug department og Corte-Aldous-Hunt, 24th and Farnam, are attracting widespread attention. Not only is Mr. Nahigian a rug authority complimentary to the past matrons Liljenstolpe. Miss Marie Mathews of reputation, but he is a practical interior decorator as well, and will consider it his great pleasure to make a visit to your home to suggest just what sizes of rugs the floors of your home call for. He will convince you at once of his practicality when he suggests such feasible plans as the exchange of rugs you now have for those of different sizings, or the marvelous changing in sizes possible to be made in even the most precious rugs. Rare indeed are the rugs shown in this collection, an embodiment of all that is worthwhile in floor coverings, exquisite gleaning of world markets, with a reserve stock which makes it possible to obtain by wire almost any colorful piece your heart desires. Rugs, moreover, offered at a discount from the original Mrs. W. A. Wilcox attended the prices of 20 per cent, and in many cases, with an additional 5 per cent.
