Not Much Chance of Dempsey Meeting "Strangler" Lewis

Odds Would Be Against Heavyweight Fistic Champion if Two Ever Got Together in Ring—Wrestler Has Edge on Leather-Pusher in Mixed Bout.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

ON'T become unduly exercised over the "scheduled" mixed match involving Jack Dempsey and Strangler Chances are that it's merely a bit of hokum de signed to get a little publicity for Dempsey, Lewis and the town of Wichita, Kan.

In the first place, Wichita seems hardly able to finance any such affair. And, secondly, Jack Kearns is entirely too smart in fistic affairs to permit a world's boxing champion to monkey around with a

One little slip, one little misstep, an extra savage iolt, a sudden twist of the arm or the leg-and Dempsey, the "million-dollar asset," might be ruined for-gloves while his rival operated in bare-handed fashion. For Dempsey's only definite chance would hinge upon whether he could send home a sleep-producing punch before he was grabbed. Inasmuch as Dempsey never has finished a truly-trained athlete with e blow, how could he hope to win? It's true Dempsey wrestled somewhat in his younger days. That was when on tour among the mining camps of the west, during which time he met all comers either at fighting or wrestling. And Dempsey knows quite a few grappling tricks. But what good would all the wrestling knowledge which he has avail him if he were in the ring grappling with gloved hands?

Fast for Heavyweight.

Dempsey is powerful-and he's chain lightning in action for a heavyweight. He can stand up under terrific ring punishment. But his muscles are of the kind which merely make it possible for him to withstand punching. A wrestler and a boxer call into action an entirely different set of musalready under way with a large cles. A wrestler couldn't hit a straight attendance. Swimming lessons are given by Coach C. E. Daubert, right hand punch if he were paid the ransom price of a thousand kings. His swimming instructor for the colarm and shoulder muscles are heavy, lege. Classes in physical educaponderous; developed to push, haul tion under the direction of other and lift-but not to snap forward in a members of the athletic departstraight line with terrific speed and ment will be started soon.

The boxer, on the other hand, has no real lifting, pulling or hauling strength in his arms or shoulders. The legs of a boxer are built for speedand little else. Those of a wrestler pack the power to crush, the power to stand up under a heavy human load. And also the ability to withstand crunches, twists and spins.

Has Strong Neck.

A fighter doesn't pay much attention to the development of the neck muscles. But almost before he develops anything else, a wrestler must develop a powerful, unbreakable neck. f he doesn't, his grappling career will be of the briefest.

HARRY D. A WINNER.

Charlfe B. Irwin, prominent Wyoming horseman, has dug up another bang-tail that is kicking up considerable dust down in Tiajuana, Mexico, this Harry D. is this equine's name, and he lifts a mean quartet of hoofs purse money for Irwin since turkey day. Just how much Harry D. has won in wagers is hard to tell, but it's a cinch he has made his backers Irwin took a liking to Harry D. one day last spring down at Tiajuana.

A few weeks previous, C. E. Groves claimed the critter, but along came another claiming race and Irwin forked over $1,100 for the runner and away went Harry D. to join Motor Cop and others. A few days later Harry D. was flying the silks of the Irwin stables.

The horse lost three straight races and lost 'em badly. Irwin then put Harry D. aboard a freight car and shipped him back to Cheyenne, where the horse was turned out on the plans. This was just what Harry D. needed.

When the Tiajuana meeting opened last November, Harry D. was on deck with the rest of the Irwin runners. The horse was full of speed and a good-looking runner. Soon after the meet started Harry D. started displaying his speed of yore. He started winning and has been winning ever since. He beat Kinglike in 1:06 2-5 for a new mark for five and one-half furlongs at Tuesday, Harry D. won the feature race at Tiajuana. It was his tenth straight win in 14 starts, a good record on any man's track.
