School of Agriculture.

The second semester of the school of agriculture will open Monday, January 15. It is expected that a number of farm hoys from various parts of the state will enter for the second semester classes.

The first registration for the autotrators short course brought a total of 20 students which is close to the maximum limit. There age two more registration dates for this course, January 15. Reservations for both of these courses have already been made in considerable numbers. Students are taught how to repair, care for and operate autos, trucks and tractors. More than half of the time is spent in actual work in the shops.

A new course in dress making will appear in the new school of agriculture.

"Run away, has she?" said Stone.
