An Open Letter to Mr. F. H. Davis, President of the First National Bank

DEAR MR. DAVIS:

We've banked with you for quite a while. We've received the most courteous treatment from you, the other officers and each and every one of your employes with whom we have come in contact. We've read your advertising and we've admired your business genius. Every evening as we journey homeward your great building hands us its cheerful message of success, of achievement, of usefulness.

They say that building cost you more than a million dollars. We're pretty sure that you know the worth of every cent of every dollar that went into that building. And we want to translate to you in terms of your First National Bank Building—in terms of its cost to you, the value of a strip of celluloid that we will have in our Strand Theater on Eighteenth and Douglas next Sunday.

Just a thin strip of 2-inch celluloid, Mr. Davis. Yet the cost of producing that strip of celluloid in Hollywood, where it was made, was more than a million dollars—the cost of your magnificent building. Many, many months were consumed in the making of that bit of film. The number of people employed before the dozens of cameras runs into the thousands. Gigantic sets, reproducing castles, gardens, buildings and yes, even towns, not built of canvas and wood, but with stone, were constructed under the supervision of experts who went even to England and studied every available bit of information obtainable. Hundreds were wholly occupied for months making by hand the arms and accoutrements, daggers, lances, trappings, furnishings, clothing. And the finished output is-a strip of celluloid.

Worth the outlay? Well, sir, come to our Strand Theater next Sunday, relax comfortably in an easy cushioned chair and let Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood possess you. Then you tell us if it's worth the outlay.

Cordially,

STRAND THEATER.
