Delegates Attending Convention of Boxing Association Want Clearing House for Information on "Pugs"

New York, Jan. 16.—Creation of a national boxing registration bureau to act as a clearing house for information on professional pugilists, and adoption of a standardized universal code of ring regulations were favored today by delegates attending the first annual convention of the national boxing association...

Willie Keeler, Joe Kelley and Steve Brodie, what an outfield! The departed Keeler always will be remembered as the most famous player of this trio, but Kelley never out of his mind.

Slugging Joe had one batting day in 1894, which deserves a chapter of its own in baseball history. In a double-header played with Cleveland, Kelley collected nine hits for a total of 15 bases in nine official times at bat, and scored seven runs.

Joe also lost much of his speed in his last five years as a big league ball player, but he piled up steals in wholesale lots in his Orioles days, and closed his career with 453 stolen bases.

Keeler scored over 100 runs in six seasons, five of them being in succession. In 1894, the year of Baltimore's first championship, he reached the high mark of 167 runs.

Josephus broke into the National league on July 15, 1891, playing with Pittsburgh against Boston. In four times at bat he landed on Pitcher Jack Stivetts for a triple and scored one run.

Besides Joe Kelley, John McGraw, Albert Robinson, Kid Gleason and Hugh Jennings are the only members of the famous Orioles active in base ball today.
