Loses Prestige in Johnson Fight

Flynn manages Bill Brennan. He thought Bill good enough to take another whack at Dempsey. But the nabobs in New York state ruled against the fight. When the match was all "cooked up" for a Michigan setting, the

That practically froze out Brennan -and re-established Wills again as Dempsey's next logical opponent. All of which annoyed and fretted Flynn to an extreme. Wills is a fistic bum-that's all.'

he ejaculated. "He dodges Brennan. All he does is pose as Dempsey's real opponent. Watch me show him up.' Flynn also manages Clem Johnson, a negro heavy, who is little more than mediocre. Flynn, in preparing the rude shock for Wills, painted Johnson as more of a dub than he really is. And Wills "fell" for the match.

It happened in New York. The affair lasted 12 rounds before the referee halted the proceedings and awarded Wills the fight via the technical knockout route.

No Glory for Wills.

One naturally assumes there's glory in any sort of fistic triumph. But there wasn't for Wills-not that night. In fact, Wills lost more prestige than he had gained in a previous year of fighting.

Johnson was terrible that night. Yet Wills, reputed to have dynamite in each hand, couldn't put Clem on the canvas and keep him there. Johnson couldn't step a hundred yards while Jack Dempsey was reeling off a mile. Yet Johnson managed to hop out of Wills' way again and again that night. Johnson closed his eves hefore he let fly with wild fistsand yet he rattled punches off of Harry.

Drawing a line on what Wills showed that night against Clem Johnson, he wouldn't last 42 seconds against Dempsey.

revenge-and accomplished his attempt to show up Wills as an overrated gladiator.

In Retirement.

Ever since that night Wills has been in retirement. Why? Did Paddy Mullins, his manager, awaken to the fact that Wills either skidded, or is over-rated. And that it's dangerous to expose him to any more fights be fore the big money shot at Dempsey? Or, did Jack Kearns, boss of Dempey, who all along thought Wills soft pickings for Dempsey, slip Mullins a tip like this:

"Hey, keep that big baby away from tough ones or he'l get knocked over and knock us out of a million dollar fight."

If these aren't among the reasons what's the real cause for the inactivity of Wills, who could be making from $15,000 to $50,000 fighting white and negro challengers this winterand yet spurns them all and lingers in seclusion.
