

Old Seventeenth Parades Streets in Recruit Drive

Regiment Reviewed by Major General Duncan — Mayor Dahlman Gives Talk in Support of Campaign.

It was like the dear old days of 1918 yesterday afternoon, with khaki-clad men moving with martial tread through the downtown streets to the music of a military band.

But it was only the parade staged by the military men of Fort Omaha and Crook as part of the recruiting campaign now being carried on to bring the Seventeenth infantry to full peace strength.

The parade—unlike most parades—moved with military precision. It started from Eighteenth and Cuming streets on the stroke of 2 and moved along the downtown streets, to the marching notes of the regimental band of 30 pieces.

Army Wagons in Line. Besides the several companies of men and their officers, there were numerous vehicles, the familiar canvas-topped army wagons, each drawn by four army mules.

At the city hall the parade was reviewed by Mayor Dahlman and Maj. Gen. Duncan, commander of the Seventh army corps of the regular army.

In the reviewing stand were also Commander Hild Stricker of the Douglas county post, American Legion; Lieut. Col. Guy Buckner, commander of the Seventeenth infantry, and Lieut. Col. C. W. Tillotson, commander of Fort Omaha.

Mayor Dahlman Talks. After passing the reviewing stand the column swung around the courthouse and then the officers and men were drawn up at attention in front of the courthouse while Mayor Dahlman delivered an address endorsing the recruiting campaign.

"I noticed when I lived out on the frontier that a man wasn't near as liable to attack me when I had a Winchester as when I didn't have," said the mayor. "The same thing is true of nations and, while we all hope we won't get into another war, our best guaranty against that is a good army."

Men Strike in Germany to Protest Arrests

is no sign of any intention by the Germans to recede from their program of nonco-operation and passive resistance to the occupational authorities.
The men in custody include state officials, industrial leaders and captives. The condition of their incarceration will not be severe, as they are to be treated as political prisoners and allowed to obtain food from restaurants, together with their favorite brand of wines, one bottle for each meal.
Prospects of good treatment, however, brought them little cheer and all appeared in a serious and determined mood when they reached Dueseldorf in motor cars from Essen today—that is, all except big, jolly Fritz Thyssen, who never lost his perpetual smile and bubbled good humor. Thyssen is the active head of the great industries founded by his father, August Thyssen, which rival the huge Stinnes industrial group.
Coal Trains Stalled.
Not one representative of the workmen has been molested by the occupational authorities thus far, but four coke and coal trains, confiscated in transit by the French, today are stalled on various sidings in the Ruhr valley, the railroad men refusing to move them toward France.
The French claim that the railway men have not "refused" to work the trains, because they have not been requested to do so, but the Germans say the occupational authorities refrain from this request only because it would meet with certain refusal.

The French are using locomotive engineers and firemen to the Ruhr and profess to be unperturbed by the developments, but they admit there is danger of serious congestion on the Ruhr railroad system should the confiscation continue and the trains remain sidetracked.
Mining operations continue throughout the Ruhr, but unofficial estimates show that the total output of the mines has decreased 20 per cent, as compared with the corresponding week last year.
Fight to Finish.
The whole affair appears to be an economic fight to the finish, for both sides are too deeply engaged to withdraw without loss of prestige.
"We can live six months without Ruhr coal," one of the highest officials of the French mission said today. "It remains to be seen how long Germany can dispense with it."
Meanwhile nearly everybody in Dueseldorf, at least, appears prosperous. The cafes are filled and the various places of amusement are doing a booming business, with a large majority of the patrons of German nationality.
The only real distress is among the bourgeoisie, as the workmen drawing wages of from 500 to 600 marks hourly, manage to live fairly comfortably.

Listen to Me!

"I Have an Interesting Message for You From a Homeless Waif: 'All We Want Is a Fair Chance to Make Good.'"

The "1,000 Club" is under way. Several new members were received Saturday night, but many more are needed. One thousand women who have a love for children are desired. All that is needed is $10 and a desire to install happiness in the hearts of homeless children.

The money to be raised through the "1,000 Club" will be turned over to the campaign committee in charge of the drive for $40,000 with which to construct a new receiving home for the society. Thirty years of growth has resulted in crowded conditions at the home, which hampers the work of the society. The intensive drive in Omaha will start on February 11, the membership committee announced yesterday. "Unless the money is raised, many future activities of the society will have to be curtailed," said Dr. Max Emmert of the Lions club who is chairman of the campaign committee. "This will be a real tragedy!"

The Nebraska Children's Home society is nonsectarian, nonpolitical. It recognizes no creed and knows no nations. It has only one purpose—to make happy and to place in good homes unfortunate homeless children.

The drive is being sponsored by the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, the Lions club and The Omaha Bee.

It is the hope of the campaign committee to have 1,000 women who love children to join the club by subscribing $10. Here is what your $10 will bring you—

Much happiness and satisfaction in knowing that some poor, homeless child has been furnished with a home and the loving care of a mother.

A membership card will be sent you showing that you are affiliated with this great humanitarian organization.

"Give Me a Chance"

Liquor-Crazed Maniac Attacks 8 Ohio Women

Search Ends With Arrest After Man Probably Fatally Wounds Cleveland Housewife.

Cleveland, Jan. 20.—The search for a run-crazed gunman, who for three days has caused a reign of terror in the vicinity of Woodland avenue and East Fifty-fifth street, ended last night with the arrest of the maniac after he had shot and probably fatally wounded Mrs. Carmela Cocco.

During his rampage the man attacked eight women and shot a man when he went to the rescue of a family.

The man was captured after a chase of more than three miles, lasting an hour and a half. During his flight he flourished revolvers and several times shot at crowds who tried to head him off. He also fired at children and pedestrians.

The shooting of Mrs. Cocco was the third outbreak of the maniac reported to the police within 30 minutes. Answering a knock on the rear door of her home last night, Mrs. Cocco found herself facing a gun.

"I'll give you money," she cried, but the maniac's answer was four shots, two of which took effect. A wound in the abdomen probably will cause her death, hospital physicians said.

The man also fired at another woman into whose home he had broken shortly before, but she was not wounded.

Six flying squadrons of police, aided by motorcycle men and every available reserve on the east side, scoured the district with drawn guns under orders to shoot to kill.

Capture was effected as the crazed man ran from another house. Firing at crowds, he fled to a gully where he was cornered.

An empty revolver also was found in his pocket.

The maniac started on his rampage Wednesday morning. On that day he broke into seven homes, beat two women and shot a man. He had eluded capture by wielding a large knife and shooting in the air.

Grand Island Man Charges Wife Chopped Auto With Ax

Grand Island, Neb., Jan. 20.—(Special.)—Because her husband accidentally ran over the toe of one of the children in backing the car out of the garage, Mrs. Mary Hoff seized an ax, it is alleged by the husband in a divorce case, and hacked and chopped the $1,400 automobile until it could be sold for only $75. The wife charged her husband with beating her, smashing her glasses and discoloring her eye. Judge Paine refused the divorce.

State Checker Champion Confesses to Robberies

Lincoln, Jan. 20.—(Special.)—Nebraska's champion checker player, Chauncey Lemen, 21, confessed, Lincoln police say, that he staged three house robberies, held up a motorman and shot Norman Walt, young business man, when the latter surprised him in the act of burglarizing the Walt home.

"I was broke and couldn't get a job," the youthful checker wizard told the police.

Lemen was arrested when he returned from a two days' pleasure trip to Kansas City. He had two big guns on him, the police say.

Search Conducted for Missing Omahan

Nathan Herzoff.

"Nathan Herzoff, 25, if you are alive or if you are in trouble, please communicate with your wife and two babies who need you."

Police and friends are broadcasting this message throughout the United States since Herzoff's disappearance January 4.

Herzoff kissed his wife, Sara Steinberg Herzoff, 23, and his two children, Martin, 3, and Albrina, 6 months old, goodbye and said he was going to work. He was employed at the Monogram Printing company, but officials of that firm say he has not been at work since the day he disappeared.

Mrs. Herzoff, who formerly lived in an apartment in the Strehlow, is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Steinberg, 2015 Cass street.

Two years ago the oldest Herzoff baby was declared the most perfect Omaha baby in a contest. Mrs. Herzoff is a graduate of Central High school. Her husband formerly lived in Sioux City.

Predicts House Will Act Against Tax Free Bonds

Representative Greene Says Breaks in Democratic Ranks Make Two-Thirds Majority Almost Certain.

By GEORGE F. AULTHER, Washington Correspondent The Omaha Bee. Washington, Jan. 20.—(Special.)—Representative Greene of Council Bluffs, as acting chairman of the ways and means committee in the absence of Representative Fordney, predicted today the house will act favorably upon the effort to secure two-thirds majority for the proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting the issuance of tax exempt securities by states and municipalities.

The effort to secure the necessary two-thirds, which failed last week, will be renewed next Tuesday.

Breaks in Ranks.

"While the southern democrats are continuing their opposition to the proposed amendment," Representative Greene said today, "there have been breaks in their ranks, while northern democrats and most of the republicans appear to be lining up in favor of the proposition."

"The injustice of the issuance of the tax-exempt security is so patent and the ill effects it is having on our finances are so apparent it will be difficult for members to stand out against it."

Assured of Support.

"I have received assurances of support from members who heretofore have been against it."

The proposed constitutional amendment forbidding the issuance of tax exempt securities was recommended by President Harding in his last message to congress.

Report to Urge Centralization of Hospital Control

Government Hospitalization Program Too Widely Scattered, View of Investigators.

By GEORGE F. AULTHER, Washington Correspondent The Omaha Bee. Washington, Jan. 20.—(Special.)—If the plans of the White hospitalization committee are received with approval by congress, the various state hospitals, including the Bellevue training school will come under a centralized federal authority for the management and control of all hospitals belonging to the government. The White committee is shortly to submit a report to congress recommending that the government hospitals, now controlled by seven or more different departments, including the Army, the Navy and the Interior department, the United States Public Health service and the United States Veterans' bureau be placed under a central organization.

It likewise recommends that a central head be given direct authority to manage all these institutions.
