The Magnificent Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH. (Continued from yesterday.) CHAPTER X.—(Continued.) In silence the hand of each of the young men went out to the president. Then their own eyes met, and their hands. They were not to be separated, after all—they were to go together under in St. Louis.

Merne, my boy, said Thomas Jefferson, when at length they two were once more in the little office. "I cannot say what your return means to me. You come as one from the grave—you resurrect another from the grave."

"Meaning, Mr. Jefferson?" "You surely have heard that my administration is in sad repute? The machinations of Colonel Burr have added nothing to its reputation. General Jackson is with Burr, and many other strong friends. And now, my boy, you not begin to see what responsibility rested on you? Had you failed, you would have dragged the flag of your country in the dust. Had you come back any time before you did, then you might have called yourself the man who ruined his president."

"The old man turned toward him, his face grave. 'I know—I knew all along—how you were tempted. She came here—Theodosia—the very day you left. I knew the conspirators fought against your success and mine. I knew what agencies they intended to use against you—it was this woman, why I know many things, whether or not you do. I know the character of Aaron Burr well enough. He has been crazed, carried away by his own ambitions—God alone knows where he would have stopped. He has been a man not surpassed in duplicity. He would stop at nothing. Moreover, he could make black look white. He is a great thing for the power which, all things considered, she might be supposed to possess with you. I knew the depth of your regard for her, the depth of her hopelessness. And more than all, I knew the gentleness and resolution of your character. It was one motive against the other. It was one—what was that?—your personal honor—that which you brought us success. You kept your oath as an officer and your unwritten oath as a gentleman. It is a great thing for a man to have his honor altogether unscathed.'

"Mr. Jefferson?" The young man before him lifted a hand. His face was ghastly pale. "You speak of my honor. Do not! Indeed, you touch me deep. Thomas Jefferson, wise old man, raised a hand. 'I shall never listen, my son!' said he. 'I will accord to you the right of hot blood to run hot. You would not be a man if you knew how great has been the cost—I see it in your face. What is broken is broken. But see how clearly I look into your soul. You are not thinking now of what you can do for yourself. You are not thinking of your new rank, your honors. You are asking now, at this moment, what you can do for her. Is it not so?' The smile that came upon the young man's face was a beautiful, wonderful thing to see. It made the wise old man sad to see it—but thoughtful, too. 'She is at Jackson, Merne?' said Mr. Jefferson. 'The young man nodded. 'And the greatest boon she could ask would be her father's forgiveness. The freedom of the man who sought to ruin this country—the man whom I scarcely dare release. Now, then,' said Thomas Jefferson, sharply, 'there comes a veil, a curtain, between you and me and all the world. No record must show that either of us raised a hand against the full action of the law, or planned that Colonel Burr should not suffer the full penalty of the code. Yes, that is true—but not his daughter's. 'Me, Jefferson? The face of Merne Lewis was strangely moved. 'I see the actual greatness of your soul; but I ask nothing.'

"Why, in my heart I feel like flinging open every prison door in the world if you have gained an empire for your country, and paid for it as you have, could not a great and rich country afford to pay to the extent of a woman's happiness? Let me be, then—he raised his long hand—'say nothing do nothing. And let this end all talk between us of these matters. I know you can keep your own counsel.' Lewis bowed silently. 'Go to Richmond, Merne. You will find there a broken conspirator and his unhappy daughter. Both are ostracized. She has no door opened to her now, though but lately she was the daughter of the vice president, the rich Mrs. Alston, wife of the governor of her state. Go to them now. Tell Colonel Burr that the president will not ask mercy for him.

"The two sat looking into each other's eyes for just a moment. Said Thomas Jefferson at length, slowly: 'So! You have come back with all happiness, all success, for me and for others—but not for yourself! Such proving as you have had has fallen to the lot of my men. I know now how great has been the cost—I see it in your face. What is broken is broken. But see how clearly I look into your soul. You are not thinking now of what you can do for yourself. You are not thinking of your new rank, your honors. You are asking now, at this moment, what you can do for her. Is it not so?' not a question you do right not to answer such a question. 'I only wanted you to be happy—that was my one desire.' She looked aside, and a moment passed before she heard his deep voice reply. 'Happy! I am the most unhappy man in all the world. But tell me, what would make you most happy now? Of these things remaining will have come back to pay my debts. Is there anything I can do? What would make you happiest?' 'My father's freedom!' 'I cannot promise that; but all that I can do I will.'

"Were my father guilty, that would be the act of a noble mind. But how? You are Mr. Jefferson's friend, not the friend of Aaron Burr. All the world knows that." "Precisely. All the world knows that Mr. Jefferson is implacable. But suppose all the world were set to wondering? I am just wondering of these things remaining will have come back to pay my debts. Is there anything I can do? What would make you happiest?' 'My father's freedom!' 'I cannot promise that; but all that I can do I will.'

Jewelers Holding Annual Convention

Hastings, Neb., Feb. 13.—Jewelers of Nebraska to the number of 153 gathered here this afternoon for the 18th annual convention of the state association.

Extra importance is attached to this convention in view of the fact that it is the first of state conventions, and the action taken here in relation to war tax on jewelry will be in the form of precedent for other state conventions. Ralph Rosser of Marion, Ind., discussed the subject this afternoon. The jewelers contend, have been relieved of war tax, while jewelry has not, not even in the line of such necessities as watches and clocks. Action will be taken Wednesday.

Are You Human? A little baby. A little child. Don't they appeal to you? Doesn't your heart yearn to pick them up, to cuddle them close to you, to shield them from all harm? sure it does else you're not human. Being human you love them. Their very helplessness makes you reach out in all your strength to aid them. In health there's no flower so beautiful. In illness there's no night so black. Save them then. Use every precaution. Take no chance. When sickness comes, as sickness will, remember it's just a baby, just a child and if the Physician isn't at hand don't try some remedy that you may have around the house for your own use. Fletcher's Castoria was made especially for babies' ills and you can use it with perfect safety as any doctor will tell you. Keep it in the house.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA Do the People Know? Do you know why you are asked to call for Fletcher's Castoria when you want a child's remedy? why you must insist on Fletcher's? For years we have been explaining how the popularity of Fletcher's Castoria has brought out innumerable imitations, substitutes and counterfeits. To protect the babies; to shield the homes and in defense of generations to come we appeal to the better judgment of parents to insist on having Fletcher's Castoria when in need of a child's medicine. And remember above all things that a child's medicine is made for children—a medicine prepared for grown-ups is not interchangeable. A baby's food for a baby. And a baby's medicine is just as essential for the baby. The Castoria Recipe (it's on every wrapper) has been prepared by the same hands in the same manner for so many years that the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and perfection in the product are synonymous. BROTHERS SHOULD READ BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of Chas. H.
