

Schuyler Girls Attacked by Cow

Miss Anna Svoboda Severely Bruised and May Have Internal Injuries.

Fremont, Neb., Feb. 22.—(Special.)—Anna Svoboda, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vaclav Svoboda, living west of Schuyler, was seriously injured and bruised, when attacked by a crazed cow that Mrs. Svoboda was trying to lead back into the farmyard after it had escaped from its pasture.

A small calf had clambered through the pasture fence and the mother immediately followed. Mrs. Svoboda waded the cow and its calf on the highway and secured a rope and an ear of corn with the intention of urging the wandering cattle to return to the fold.

The cow would not budge without the calf at its heels. When Mrs. Svoboda tried to lead the calf back to the farmyard, the mother cow charged head downward to protect it from being sprung. Mrs. Svoboda was knocked to the ground, and her daughter came rushing up to effect a rescue.

The maddened cow immediately turned its attack upon the new enemy and dashed the girl to the ground, trampling her with its hoofs. Every time the victim made an effort to rise to her feet, the cow would renew its attack until Miss Svoboda succeeded in crawling to safety, bruised and beaten.

The Grand Babylon Hotel Market News of the Day

By ARNOLD BENNETT. (Continued From Yesterday.)

"I hope," said Rocco, suddenly opening his eyes, "I hope you're in the police without any delay. It's getting late, and I don't like going without my night's rest."

"Where do you suppose you'll get your night's rest?" Racksale asked. "In the cells, of course. Haven't I told you I know I'm beaten. I'm not sure I'm able to get the goods there at a price that's a prima facie case against me. I expect I shall get off with a year or two's imprisonment if they don't hurry up."

"I shall be in a position to prove that I am not implicated in the murder of Regina Dimmock," Racksale said. "Where has Dimmock's corpse been during the last three or four days, since she died?"

"I don't know," Rocco answered, surprised at the simplicity of the question. "It's been in my room, and one night it was on the roof; once it went out of the hotel as luggage, but it came back the next day as a case of Demerara sugar. I forgot where else it has been, but it's been kept perfect for a great many days, every consideration."

"Apparently I frightened you this afternoon," Rocco said. "You were not afraid of a search?"

"I knew that no search was intended," Rocco said. "But you are trying to frighten me. But I was frightened. I merely did that. There was no time to be lost—that I must act quickly. I did act quickly, but it seems that you're quick enough."

"Rocco, you are a great man in your line. Why did you go into this thing?" Racksale asked. "I was fascinated—fascinated by Jules. He, too, is a great man. We had great opportunities here in the Grand Babylon. It was a great game, the prizes were enormous. You would not be quick enough to know the facts. Perhaps some day you will know them, for you are a fairly clever person at getting at the truth."

"And now you are ruined?" Rocco said. "Not ruined, not ruined. Afterward, in a few years, I shall come up again. Rocco has genius like me; he never ruined till he is dead. Genius is always forgiven. I shall be forgiven. Suppose I am sent to prison. When Jules comes back, he will be free. He shall be Rocco—the great Rocco. And the hotels of Europe will invite me to join them."

"Let me tell you, as man to man, that you have achieved your own degradation. There is no excuse." "I know it," said Rocco. "Let us go."

Racksale was distinctly and notably impressed by this masterly reply. He felt that the man to whom he was talking was a man of a different order. He felt that he had three thousand pounds a year. He even felt very sorry for him. And so, side by side, the captor and the captive went down the stairs to the deserted corridor of the hotel. Rocco stopped at the grating of the first floor.

"It will be locked," said Racksale. "We must use the stairs tonight." "But I have a key, I always carry one," said Rocco, and he pulled one out of his pocket. He unlocked the iron screen and pushed it open. Racksale smiled at his readiness and aplomb.

"You're a man," said Rocco, bowing in his finest manner, and Racksale stepped into the lift.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 22.—All American markets were quiet today on account of Washington's birthday. All American grain markets were open as usual, but trading was very light.

Winnipeg and Buenos Aires grain markets were open as usual, but trading was very light. Winnipeg made its highest prices for wheat early and closed at about the bottom, with a net loss of half a cent.

Winnipeg was unchanged to bid from the last. The Liverpool opened 1-4 cent higher on wheat and unchanged on corn. Winnipeg oats were unchanged to 1-8 lower; rye unchanged and flax seed 1-4 lower. Buenos Aires flax seed advanced 1c at the opening.

Dullness characterized the Winnipeg wheat market. Country roads in the Canadian northwest are still impassable, due to recent heavy snowstorms, and hedging pressure was light, but there was rather persistent selling by Chicago elevator interests. Shorts were best buyers.

Cash Wheat Unchanged. A Winnipeg message to Logan & Bryan says that the market for wheat is quiet.
