Schabinger Gives Creighton Team Hard Drill; Lovely Plays

HE chances of Creighton's basketball team beating the University of Nebraska here Saturday night took a big jump yesterday afternoon when Capt. Jimmy Lovely of the Blue and White quitted reported for practice.

Lovely, who is a star forward and a crackin' good player, has been out of the Creighton lineup for the past three weeks because of an injured knee. Said knee is reported to be in good condition now, and the presence of Lovely on the floor yesterday caused Ol Man Joy to make his appearance on the Blue campus.

The Creighton captain practiced with his teammates and his injured knee didn't seem to give him much trouble, although he took particular pains to see that it got the best of care.

Coch Schabinger will send the Blue and White hoopers through another practice with the freshmen this afternoon.

Tickets for the big game went on sale at Beaton's drug store and the Creighton gymnasium office yesterday. A large crowd is expected to witness the contest, which will mark the resumption of athletic relations between Nebraska and Creighton.

Scrambled Sports of Week

THE Omaha university athletic board may apply for a berth in the Nebraska state athletic conference.

The Maroons were formerly entrenched in the conference, but withdrew from the circle in 1921 when an argument bobbed up over a football game played at Fontenelle park between Omaha and Coach "Bob" Sisty's Midland college Lutherans.

During the basketball seasons Omaha always ranked high in the conference standings. The conference games, when played at the Maroons' gymnasium, drew large crowds and more than paid expenses.

Since they dropped out of the conference, the Maroons have been playing small institutions. A victory or a defeat by one of these small schools failed to dent the reputation of those involved, simply because no reputation was at stake.

Omaha university, in our opinion, would greatly benefit itself as a university if it got back into the conference. The publicity the Maroons would receive when they played conference teams would be worth something to the university, to say nothing of the part it would play in helping athletics among state schools.

Surely the Maroons gain nothing by playing such teams as Tabor, Western Union, Tarkio, Mo., and Trinity college.

Eleven teams make up the conference, Nebraska Wesleyan, Peru, Kearney, Grand Island, Doane, Hastings, Wayne, Midland, Chadron, Colver and York. Should Omaha re-enter the circle an even dozen teams would compose the conference. Have each member send a representative to schedule meetings and have the schedules arranged so that every member got a fair deal with each other, and there is no reason why the Nebraska state conference couldn't be as beneficial to athletics as the Missouri valley conference is to the valley.

Omaha university recently announced that it intended to grow with Omaha. Surely a university in a town the size of Omaha should belong to some sort of athletic conference. By joining the state conference it would be a step in the right direction, for athletics play an important part in the life of any university, college or high school.

Iowa Flipper Leads Big Ten

Chicago, Feb. 27.—University of Iowa, the only unbeaten basketball team in the Western conference title race, by virtue of its win over Minnesota last night, 29 to 24, not only strengthened its position in the championship race but won the right to claim in Funk, a forward, the leading individual score in the Big Ten.

Funk, who previous to last night's game, was the acknowledged leader in scoring free throws, added 11 more free goals to his credit and displaced Harrison Barnes of Chicago, who was leading the conference scoring with 116 points. Funk now has 123 points for the season, 91 being free goals.

Iowa's other forward, James, increased his field goal total in last night's game by three, making 31 so far this season and giving him undisputed possession of third place in the conference for caging field goals.

Colletti Challenges Winner of Villa Bout

New York, Feb. 27.—The New York state athletic commission today accepted a challenge filed by Joe Colletti, flyweight boxer of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for a match with the winner of the bout Thursday night between Pancho Villa, the champion, and Frankie Genaro, for the American flyweight title.

Jock Malone Wins

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Jock Malone of St. Paul was awarded a technical knockout over Johnny Klesch of Cleveland, in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round battle at East Chicago Monday. Referee Dave Barry stopped the fight after Malone had punched Klesch into almost helpless condition.

The long left hand of the St. Paul boxer proved too strong for Cleveland boy and Malone practically won the battle in the first round when he clipped Klesch in the stomach with a hard left drive. After that punch Klesch was slowed up to almost a snail's pace and Malone danced around his opponent peppering him with rights and lefts to the body and face.

First Western League Club to Leave for South Monday

The annual exodus of Western league clubs to southern training camps will begin next Monday when Manager Jack Lovell of Tulsa will leave with his battery men for Mineral Wells, Tex., where the Oilers will begin the task of ironing out the winter kinks.

Omaha will be the second Western club to establish training quarters in the south. Barney Burch, Buffalo owner, and Ed Konecny, the new manager, will be on hand at Corsicana, Tex., to greet the advance guard of Buffaloes on March 10.

Of the eight clubs in the circuit five have selected southern points for training. Oklahoma City considers itself in a southern state and will train at home. Wichita also will remain at home. Sioux City will journey to some southern camp, yet to be selected.

St. Joseph will train at Clarksdale, Miss., with the Minneapolis club. Manager "Wally" Smith has ordered the club to report March 15.

John Corriden will lead the Des Moines Boosters to Ponca City, Okla., to begin training March 20, and the Denver Bears will go to Excelsior Springs, Ark., March 15.

That a host of new faces will be seen in the Western league this season is evidenced by the fact that the majority of clubs have gone in for young blood. But of course good looking clubs on paper often prove grand busts on the field.

Barney Burch, Omaha Magnate, Is Friend of "Knothole Fraternity"

BARNEY BURCH, Omaha magnate, announces kiddies will be admitted free to Western league ball games here this season except on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

And behind this announcement is an interesting little yarn. It concerns a resolution made some score or more years ago.

In a small Texas town there was a town team. But the team played inside a high board fence. The magistrates in the village were very alert that no one entered the confines of the high boards except those armed with a passport—a 50-cent piece.

Caught in Act. Fifty-cent pieces were even scarcer with the kiddies in those days than they are now, and as a consequence this little town had its knothole gang.

longed to this group. He carried a large jackknife like the rest of the knothole fraternity, and when the blue-coated chaps who carry large clubs on their arms were not looking, he would apply the knife to the board and carve out a hole big enough to get an "eye-full" of what was happening inside those towering, sinister looking walls.

Makes Good Promise. One day a big policeman caught the little chap in the act of whittling an "eye-hole." He was given a good shaking and warned never to do it again.

When the big policeman left, this lad exclaimed: "Just wait until I get big and own a ball club, I'll let all the kids in free."

And so, the kid, matured into manhood and known in baseball as Barney Burch, owner of the Omaha club, has made good his promise. He's a friend of the knothole gang.

First of Robins Off for South

New York, Feb. 27.—Taking up the legira to the southland already started from all sections of the north by major league baseball players, a trio of Brooklyn pitchers, the first members of that club to start, will embark on the steamer Lenape today en route for Jacksonville, Fla. There will be a general assembly of the team there March 8.

Metrolopolitan admirers of Babe Ruth, the Yankees' home run king, were reassured today when word reached them from Colonel Huston, half owner of the Yankees, who arrived at Hot Springs yesterday, that the Bambino really is on the verge of his best spring condition of several years. Colonel Huston, who will remain with his players officially a few days, was satisfied with the work of those of the team there "boiling out."

The sun shone yesterday on Martin, Tex., for the first time since the Giants went there to train and the world's champions held their first real workout.

Mercede, Cal., Feb. 27.—Ray "Lefty" Francis was en route today to join Ty Cobb's Detroit Tigers at their training camp at Augusta, Ga. Francis, a pitcher, was with Washington last year, but was traded to Detroit.
