Drama League

On Friday afternoon at 4 p. m. the Drama League will present Ruth Draper at the Brandeis theater. She has been called an immensely gifted actress, with a great dignity as an artist, in her original character sketches.

She presents and enacts little comedies of character that one minute hold her audience tense in pathos, the next minute laughing at the follies of easily recognized society types. As she herself is a member of the well known Draper family of high social standing, and as she first gave her sketches in the drawing rooms of society she would find no obstacle in such representations, but the marvel is that she portrays the crudest of gum chewing factory girls with equal facility.

There was a touch of domestic satire in "At an Art Gallery," with the family making its rounds laboriously while the little daughter picked the numbers out of the catalogue. And throughout she holds the active co-operation of the roused imaginations of her audience.

Her Omaha program is announced as follows: PART I. (a) At an Art Exhibition. (b) Three Generations in a Court of Domestic Relations. (c) A Debutante. PART 2. (a) A Class in Greek Pops. (b) In a New England Village. (c) A Delinquent Possess in a Hall of a Hospital. PART 3. In a Railway Station on the Western Plains. The West Sisters' String quartet will play for the Omaha Drama League preceding the Ruth Draper program.
