

Present Prices of Farm Products Afford Profit

Moderate Optimism Prevails in Agricultural Industry, Despite Uncertainty of European Markets.

Washington, March 6.—(Special.)—Moderate optimism prevails in the agricultural industry, despite the uncertainty of European markets to buy American farm products, says the United States Department of Agriculture, in its monthly agricultural review published today.

The south is optimistic and plainly intends to plant more cotton. The corn belt apparently thinks rather better of corn than it did a year ago, but finds some difficulty in making up its mind about hogs. The range county is outspokenly for sheep, but saying little about cattle.

Prices of agricultural products are regarded as high enough to maintain production of most of the important products, with the possible exception of potatoes.

The south looms large in the whole agricultural situation. If continental Europe materially cuts down purchases of our wheat and pork this year, cotton may become something of a key crop.

Well-informed men consider that another billion dollar cash crop in the cottonbelt would go a long way to offset a falling European market for wheat and meal.

In general, crop prices are now relatively higher than livestock prices, due partly to the present price of cotton. Eggs and butter are the only products showing a price decline for the month, but this is usual at the season, prices of commodities other than food that farmers buy also advanced so that the January general index of purchasing power of farm products in terms of other commodities as worked out by the department stood unchanged at 68.

Reuters Dispatch Denies Stranger Expected at Doorn

London, March 6.—Reuters's correspondent at Doorn says that the visit to Corfu of Princess Helene, the former emperor's wife, is being undertaken at the request of Wilhelm, and is for the purpose of investigating the state of his property at Corfu. Absolute denial is given, according to the correspondent, to the report that her visit to Corfu is related to her physical condition.

Fontenelle Case Under Advisement

Agent Tells of Sales

The chief government testimony was by Rexford Thompson, prohibition agent working out of Minneapolis, who said he registered at the Fontenelle under the name R. L. Taylor, January 15, that a bellboy took his grips to his room, No. 103, and when about to depart, said: "Want anything else?"

"No," replied Thompson. "I can get you some good liquor," the boy said, according to Thompson. The agent said he bought a bottle of gin for $11 and that, the same day, he bought another bottle from another bellboy.

He said he left the hotel, but returned January 26 and bought more liquor that day. The next day he called for a bellboy and paid him $10 for a pint of whiskey, he said.

"The boy took the money and went downstairs, but soon telephoned me that he couldn't get a pint, but could supply me with a quart. I told him to bring the quart," said Thompson.

He said he bought whiskey or gin from other bellboys January 28. On January 30 he called for a boy, Jim said, and the bell captain responded, "Pays $11 for gin."

"I said I wanted some liquor and he told me he didn't handle it himself, but would send one of the bellboys to me," Thompson testified. "The boy soon came. I ordered a bottle of gin, paid him $11 and he got me the liquor in a few minutes."

An information against the bell captain, Leo Phelan, was issued yesterday and he was arrested on a charge of selling liquor.

He was a defense witness yesterday afternoon. He admitted that he responded to Thompson's call, but said he sent the bellboy to Thompson's room because he suspected this particular boy and wanted to trap him if possible.

"You didn't watch him, did you?" Judge Woodrugh asked.

"We were very busy just at the time," said Phelan. Judge Woodrugh declared at the close of the government's evidence that it would take strong defense evidence to convince him that the management of the hotel was not aware of this traffic, "when it seems any and every bellboy approached had the liquor, and plenty of it, and that they even used the telephone to negotiate sales in the hotel."

Robert Samardick, who raided the hotel without finding liquor January 31, testified that he had received complaints about the Fontenelle Division Chief H. L. Duncan of Minneapolis said he, too, had received such complaints.

Richard Ryan, government chemist, Washington, D. C., testified that he analyzed the contents of the 13 bottles and found them to contain from 21 to 47 per cent of redistilled alcohol. Though the bottles bore Haig & Haig, Waterfall & Frazer and other well-known labels, their contents were bogus, he said.

Trial of some of the bellboys arrested at the time of the Fontenelle hotel raid will begin in federal court this morning.

MANY WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS
Through the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Two Interesting Cases

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the common ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Another Operation Avoided
Akron, Ohio.—"I can never praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for what it has done for me. I had such pains and weakness that the doctor told me nothing but an operation would help me. But my mother had taken the Vegetable Compound and she told me when it had done for her, and so I took it and I am glad to tell every one that it made me a strong woman, and I have had two children since then."—Mrs. R. G. WESTOVER, 325 Grant Street, Akron, Ohio.
