Safe Investments for Women.

Among the safe forms of investment that are open to women, various insurance companies are offering attractive investments in the form of paid-up or 20 and 30-year endowment policies. In these cases the face amount of the policies is paid at the date of maturity. The money may then be banked or invested safely to provide for old age. I especially recommend insurance for the woman who must earn her own living and who has little time for the study of the investment market. Most endowment policies, after the first three years, have a loan or cash-surrender value, in case the holder is unable to continue the payments or needs cash immediately.

It might be expedient for a woman who has a limited capital and no family to whom she wishes to bequeath it to invest a part or the whole of it in an annuity. In this event, at her death the principal reverts to the annuity company, but she has secured during her lifetime a larger return than she could in any other way. For instance, a woman of about 60 years of age could buy an annuity of $10,000 and enjoy the income of approximately $1,000 against the probable income of $500 from an ordinary investment.

For the woman who has no earning power and who depends upon the return from her holdings to live, good bonds are a safe investment. Those backed by a city, state or government are the safest. The lower the interest rate on the bonds the safer the investment is the general rule. Bonds are redeemable at definite dates, but are negotiable at any time if listed on the various stock exchanges of the country. Bonds so listed are therefore a wiser investment than those which are not listed, though these are often just as sound and salable. We must remember that bonds, if they are underlying bonds, constitute a first mortgage on the physical property itself. In case of financial failure, the tangible property—the real estate, buildings or railroad equipment, as the case may be—become the property of the bondholders and can usually be sold to make the bonds good.—From the February Delinquent.

College Club.

The Omaha College club domestic education section, Mrs. S. B. Hughes, leader, will meet Wednesday, 1:30 p. m., at Orchard & Wilhelm store, fifth floor. J. E. Livingston will speak on "Period Furniture."

leadership of Mrs. Leota Travor. The cast will include Mrs. Ralph Troup and the Misses Wilma Monnette, Elsie Erickson and Bessie Gulbranson.

themselves should be given a pension" will be the subject of a debate to be given by Mrs. N. K. Sype and Mrs. Edward Johnson, before the parliamentary law department of the Omaha Woman's club Thursday, 2:30 p. m., at the Y. W. C. A.

PARIS has been virtually brought to your door. She has said her last say in regards to what we shall wear this season. Definitely now the mode stands revealed. New ideas in sleeves, hem lines, drapes, silhouettes and trimmings as decreed by Paris are to be viewed in our extensive and exclusive assemblage of new apparel.

And its distinction is more than skin deep. Any garment, however inexpensive, can have style, but only those of select quality, of perfect workmanship and fineness of finish can retain it.

The style leadership of Herzberg's is acknowledged by all followers of fashion

It is characteristic of Herzberg's apparel that its distinction be permanent. To its exterior smartness is added interior soundness of construction that makes it the most economical apparel Milady can own.
