LOOK at the above chart. It shows facts that you already know—but possibly you hadn't connected them with your shoes. Take the foot, as Nature planned it, then as civilization has used it, and finally study how the Arch Preserver Shoe meets the requirements of both Nature and Civilization. Of course, such a shoe is superior. Of course, it gives comfort. The concealed, built-in arch bridge makes it possible to support the foot properly and yet have the smartest styles too. Let us show you the new patterns.

Women in Industry

That farm labor is the occupation in which more women are engaged than any other except domestic service is revealed in facts culled from the 1920 census and recently issued by the women's bureau, Department of Labor.

Other interesting findings published in the pamphlet entitled "The Occupational Progress of Women," are:

A decrease of 344,237 among women engaged in domestic and personal service in the last 10 years.

An increase of 832,552, or 140.4 per cent among women in clerical occupations.

An increase of 282,607 or 33.5 per cent among women in professional service and "a healthy increase in proprietary, official and supervisory occupations."

The number of women engaged in trade increased 42.7 per cent from 1910 to 1920, and in many occupations, mainly those of a proprietary nature enormous increases are shown.

"These and other conditions revealed indicate tremendous upheavals in the traditions of women's employment and that more and more industrial opportunities are being offered to women," the report says.

"The occupational field for women is broadening rather than concentrating on a few long established occupations."

"Changing times and changing conditions are evidenced also by the increases and decreases in occupation which are unimportant numerically. The country loses nothing by the fact that there are fewer midwives, fewer bath attendants and saloonkeepers, fewer bath house keepers and attendants, and fewer dance hall and skating rink keepers. Nor is the country always the gainer when women branch out into new and untried occupations; for instance, 223 women reported their occupations as longshoremen and stevedores in 1920, as compared with 44 in 1910; 1,495 sales clerks were employed in 1920, and 152 gave their occupations as laborers on roads and street building and repairing.

Fashions of the Moment.

Small clusters of artificial fruits are used for trimming evening frocks.

Deauville handkerchiefs are used by many for neck scarf to wear under coats. They are in the picture at the moment.

A huge loop and a long end are placed just a little to the left of the middle front on some of the new evening frocks.

Lovely straw hats of poke shape show trimming of straw flowers or silk ones.

Increase of Policewomen.

"On the other hand, policewomen number 236 in 1920 and street car conductors 253. In neither of these occupations was a single woman returned in 1910."

During the past few years, every time a woman invaded an occupation hitherto reserved for men a pursuit for men only attention was called to the fact by the woman's coworkers. When a woman dropped out of domestic service or gave up dressmaking to work in a munition factory or became a street car conductor, the entire community heard of her new employment, but no one mentally subtracted her from the ranks of those in her former occupation, and so the impression gained ground that vast numbers of women were taking up gainful occupations for the first time.

According to statistics, however, there were only a half-million more women employed in gainful occupations in 1920 than in 1910, but if the increase in population is taken into consideration, the proportion of all women 10 years of age and over gainfully occupied decreased from 23.4 per cent in 1910 to 21.1 per cent in 1920.

Decrease in Personal Service.

Tremendous decrease among women returned as employed in agriculture

A Home on $20 a Week

"I am enclosing a clipping from a newspaper published in one of the middle western states in which you will note, it is the consensus of opinion that a young couple may marry with $100 capital and an assured income of $20 a week," writes Constant Reader.

Of course, I read the discussion more than several times and was astonished to find the statement that a very large proportion of the married couples—many with children—were living on this sum and one real estate agent gave a case where a man was well into his third year of payments on a home whose income was not more than $20 a week.

Constant Reader wants my opinion. She is discouraged because she cannot do what others say they are doing. But—as I read, I noted that the wife in most every case, was adding to the income usually by raising vegetables, fruits, keeping a cow and chickens and selling the excess produce.

So there is nothing to become discouraged about. Where the cash income is $20 and the wife adds to it by going into the farming or any other business, surely no one could deduce the conclusion that that family is actually living on $20 a week.

Since the problem of financing marriage and a home is growing most acute in our day and age, and since I know that many families live and live well on much less than other families, won't some of my readers who are solving the problem write in and let us pass on the solution to the many young folks who are eagerly looking forward to the making of a home, if only they can find the way to make ends meet.
