wheeler announced that he had seed secret. After several days of reticence, during which he shut himself up in the sitting-room writing letters, and passed mysterious words and winks with Ralph at table, he disclosed a project which swept away all claude's plans and purposes.

On the return trip from Denver Mr. Wheeler had make a detour down into Yucca county, Colorado, to visit an old friend who was in difficulties. Tom Wested was a Maine man, from Wheeler's own neighborhood. Several years ago he had lost his wife. Now his health had broken down, and the Denver doctors said he must retire from business and get into a low alitiude. He wanted to go back to Maine and live among his condition even to undertake the sale of his ranch and live stock. Mr. Wheeler had been able to help his friend, and at the same time did a good stroke of business for himself, He owned a farm in Maine, his share of his father's estate, which for years he had rented for little more than the upkeep. By making over this property, and assuming certain mortgages, he got Wested's fine, well-watered ranch mand sevenange. He paid him a good price for his cattle, and promised to price fo price for his cattle, and promised to take the sick man back to Maine and Test of Strength see him comfortably settled there.
All this Mr. Wheeler explained to his family when he called them up to the living room one hot, breathless night after supper. Mrs. Wheeler, who seldom concerned herself with

Mr. Wheeler assured his wife that he wasn't taking advantage of poor Wested; the timber on the Maine place was really worth a good deal of money; but because his father had always been so proud of his great pine woods, he had never, he said, just felt like turning a sawmill loose in them.
