

Judge Forbids Violin Prodigy Concert Here

Threatens Sammy Carmell With Detention Home If He Plays Before Theater Audience.

"As soon as Sammy Carmell puts his foot on any Omaha stage to play a violin as an entertainer, I will put him in River View home," District Judge Day declared in juvenile court Saturday morning.

"He will be immediately taken into custody by juvenile officers, should he attempt it."

"This was also the attitude of Deputy Labor Commissioner Larsen, who declared that the boy would become technically delinquent upon his appearance before an audience."

"The law is very plain," he said. "Sammy Carmell, boy violinist, protégé of the Nebraska Society for the Development of Musical Talent, is scheduled to play at the World theater April 14 to aid the society in a drive for funds."

He appeared in juvenile court Saturday morning after a test appearance Friday.

"This is not a regular, but a framed case, and this court does not at this time find Sammy Carmell a delinquent child under the statute," Judge Day said. "The case is continued to April 14. The boy is returned to his parents until further order of the court. He may be called for further hearing at the discretion of the chief juvenile probation officer."

Donald J. Burke and E. B. Goodman, who represented the Carmell boy, argued that his appearance on the stage did not constitute delinquency under the law.

Frank A. Kennedy, labor commissioner, attended the hearing.

Mitchell to Go to N. Y. for Quiz in Keenan Murder

Philadelphia, March 31.—J. Keenleyside Mitchell, the "Mr. Marshall" in the mysterious chloroforming of Dorothy Keenan, New York cloak model, will leave here today for New York to be questioned by Assistant District Attorney Pecora in connection with the girl's death.

E. T. Stotesbury, father-in-law of Mitchell and partner of J. P. Morgan, spent two and one-half hours at the Mitchell residence on Rittenhouse Square last night, but on leaving declined to make any comment on what had transpired.

Visiting Nurses "Angels of Mercy"

Only bread and tea for their evening meal and no shoes for their naked feet was the plight in which Miss Elfrida Seeck, South Omaha nurse, found a family of four children, in a packing box hut shelter, in an almost inaccessible ravine in the Brown Park district.

The mother, sole support of the family, was too proud to make known their circumstances. Her husband, subject to epileptic seizures, has been out of work for months.

Miss Seeck gave nursing care to the father, notified a North Side church organization of the family's dire need; and arranged with the school teacher to obtain shoes for the boys through The Omaha Bee Shoe Fund. She also arranged for the father to receive medical attention at Creighton dispensary and if he is pronounced a hospital case and unable to support his family she will assist the mother in obtaining a mother's pension.

This case emphasizes the fact that free nursing service is only one of the missions of the Visiting Nurse call.

"Our nurses perform a high degree of social service," Miss Florence McCabe, superintendent, points out. "They are the agencies by which other welfare organizations are called in to complete the alleviation of suffering and distress."

To "carry on" this work for 1923, a drive for $25,000 will be launched in Omaha, April 23-28.

The local staff, with Miss McCabe, numbers 25 nurses, as follows: Marie Anderson, Harriett Brennenstall, Hazel Brennenstall, Edith Conry, Hazel Drake, Ethel Findley, Lillian Jaske, Mildred Huntington, Laura Litton, Leona Loringer, Eva May, Marie
