

Sunday Delivery of Ice in Summer Barred

An ordinance prohibiting the delivery of ice on Sunday in Omaha was passed by the city council Tuesday morning by a five to one vote. It will become effective in 15 days. Police Commissioner Butler was the only voter against the ordinance. He offered an amendment which would make the ordinance effective except during June, July and August.

"I believe it means a hardship to many of the poorer folks of the city during those three hot months," said Butler. "I have a 75-pound ice box and the ice often melts from Saturday to Monday. Many others haven't even that big a place to keep ice. Moreover, I have information the municipal ice stations will not be kept open on Sunday. Otherwise I would favor giving the ice men their Sundays off the year around."

There was no second to the amendment made by Butler. "If people must have ice on Sunday they can get it at any of the plants," argued Commissioner Hopkins. "It's cheaper, too. But by buying a little larger quantity on Saturday they will have enough to last."

Aged Woman Declares She, Not Her Husband, Broke Law
It was a question of bootlegging or losing their home, their only possession, Mrs. Charles Westergard, 78, pioneer Omahan, 1036 South Twenty-third street, said in Federal Judge Woodrough's court yesterday.

"The poor farm stared us in the face," declared the woman, who insisted that she and not her husband, 72, was the law violator. Both hobbled into the courtroom aided by the

But the law had to be enforced, Mrs. Westergard was fined $25 and her husband $1.

Wedded Couple at Odds to Come to Court Cooler

She—"He's insanely jealous of me."
He—"She's packed up on an average of three times a week to leave me."
She—"You knocked me cuckoo."

He—"Well, you're not going to live with me any more."
So ran the breezy repartee between Lloyd Hinton and his wife, Elizabeth, 2204 Douglas street, in police court yesterday. She caused his arrest at 2 in the morning on a charge of assault and battery.

The couple was ordered to report the last of the month.
