Omaha May Be Given New Postoffice

Postal Commission, Investigating Conditions at Local Office, Says Congestion Must Be Relieved.

A survey of postoffice space and facilities made here today by the postal commission of Washington may result in a new postoffice for Omaha, E. H. McDermott, secretary of the commission, said before he left the city late yesterday afternoon.

Conditions here are very crowded and something will have to be done to relieve the congestion," said Mr. McDermott. "There are two ways of doing this. One way is to build a new postoffice building and the other is to rent additional space at high

Mr. McDermott, who is secretary of the joint congressional commission on postal service, aided by P. A. McGurty, made a survey of the postoffice in conjunction with the review of charts, maps and reports sent to him sometime ago by Postmaster Charles E. Black.

Mr. McDermott said that the recom mendations of the commission will be sent to congress and it is hoped that congress will act favorably and quickly on the findings because of the general crowded conditions of the postoffices of many large cities of the country.

Leave for Denver.

"We are traveling only to the large cities," he said. "We are not making any recommendations concerning per sonnel, but are only determining needs for additional space and facilities and ascertaining the general conditions for handling the mails." Mr. McDermott and party left for Denver. They will tour the Pacific
