

Split Imminent in Both Parties Over World Court

Three High Republican Officials Against Harding's Plan—Wilson's Stand May Cause Democratic Break.

By MARK SULLIVAN. Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Washington, April 23.—It has become clear during the past week that of the four high officials of the republican party, three are against the world court. The four high priests are the president; the national chairman, John T. Adams; the chairman of the republican senatorial committee, George Moses of New Hampshire, and the chairman of the republican national congressional committee, Will Wood of Indiana.

Of these four, Mr. Wood last week served notice on Harding that under his official responsibility he felt called upon to object to the introduction of the world court as a republican issue. Senator Moses is in Europe; but everybody in Washington knows that he is opposed to the court and has actually gone on records favoring a fellow isolationist, Sen. McCumber of Illinois, rather than Harding, for the next presidential nomination. The third official, Chairman John Adams of the national committee, has made no public declaration.

Split Is Serious. There can be no minimizing the seriousness of this split between President Harding and the other three official leaders. Chairman Wood is in a position to say to Mr. Harding: "My official responsibility is as great as yours, and gives me the right to be heard. I am responsible for electing republican congressmen. Inasmuch as our present majority is barely 15, mine is a serious and difficult function. Based on my official knowledge of the conditions, my judgment is that the presence of the world court as a republican party issue is a handicap and I ask that it be abandoned."

Chairman Moses of the senatorial committee can go to Harding, begin by pointing out his official responsibility for the election of republican senators next year, and then continue with the same speech as Mr. Wood's. Could Back Harding. Of course the facts might be different. These three insurgent party officials could take a different attitude. They could say, "The president is the head of the republican party. What he says goes. We may not like it, but we defer to it. Instead of putting our own contrary views forward publicly we accept the issues as the president makes them, and will do our best to support them and carry them through."

In the democratic party there is the imminent possibility and the acute fear among democrats of a precisely similar split. Democratic leaders rarely ever pick up a daily paper without a tremor of apprehension lest they find in it something from Woodrow Wilson that will "spill the beans."

If Wilson comes out with a demand that the democratic party shall stand where he compelled it to stand in 1920, in favor of the league of nations, as is, and against any lesser or partial steps toward international co-operation, then in that event, most of the other democratic leaders will throw up their hands.

Success Seen Without Wilson. But if Wilson will remain silent on this point, or take a more tolerant position, the other democratic leaders believe they can so phrase this broad issue of foreign relations, and so maneuver the situation next year as to win success through a republican split. These democratic leaders want to be in favor of the international court and of other steps toward co-operation for the prevention of war, but short of the league of nations as it is.

They say there is sure to be a split in one of the parties and possibly in both; and they think that if Wilson will remain silent they can confine the split to the republicans. But they fear Wilson greatly.

One of the four or five most prominent democratic leaders said to the writer: "I should like to come out in favor of a modified league of nations, but I am afraid Wilson might 'bawl me out.'"

U. S. to Enter Court. As regards the world court specifically, it is the strong judgment of the present writer that after the fighting and shouting is over America will enter, not Harding's court exactly as it stands, but a modified world court. It will really be a stronger court than Harding proposed, but by the debate in the senate, and by other processes, it will have been divorced from the league of nations even more completely than Harding now proposes.

In spite of the clear republican split, a decided majority of the present republican senators are in favor of America entering a properly organized world court. Of the democrats, all are in favor of it except a scant three or four hard boiled irrecconcilables of the type of Reed of Missouri.

Futures Trading Allowed by Law, Is Painted Out

Report That Federal Statute Would Close Grain Exchanges Denied—No Trading Here in Futures.

Washington, April 23.—The Department of Agriculture has issued a formal statement declaring that trading in grain futures would not be interrupted by the operations of the grain futures act upheld by the supreme court, so long as the exchanges complied with the law. Several exchanges, the statement said, already had met the requirements and the Chicago Board of Trade had announced its intention to cooperate in enforcing the regulations.

"Reports that this law will put the grain exchange out of business or interfere with their legitimate functions are entirely without foundation," said the statement. "It does not interfere with hedging transactions on the boards of trade that receive designations as 'contract markets.' Neither does it interfere with ordinary speculation in the buying and selling of contracts for future delivery on such markets."

"If, however, there should be evidence of undue manipulation or attempts to corner the market, or of the dissemination of false or misleading information about crop or market conditions by members of the exchanges, such conduct would be inquired into and promptly dealt with as required by the law. The law gives authority to observe and inquire into the operations on grain exchanges and to speak with authority concerning such matters."

No Trading Here Now.

"The Omaha exchange does not trade in futures at present," said President Sam S. Carlisle of the Omaha Grain Exchange. "The statement from the Department of Agriculture, however, is opportune, because the decision of the court probably left an impression among the country grain trade that trading in futures of every character was to be prohibited."

Railroads Announce Reductions in Rates

Reduced rates effective April 17 were established by Union Pacific system lines and other transcontinental carriers on a number of commodities, in which Omaha and Missouri river cities are particularly interested, such as soap, canned goods, paper and rubber tires.

Frank W. Robinson, freight traffic manager of the Union Pacific lines, announced Monday that on June 1 rates on corn from Omaha and Missouri river points to North Pacific coast points will be reduced from 44 cents to 39 cents a hundred pounds. The same rate will be carried on corn products.

To California and South Pacific coast destinations the rate of 61 cents will be reduced to 55 cents June 1. Other important rate changes on transcontinental traffic have been checked in by the carriers from Omaha, Missouri river and points east thereof to become effective at a later date not yet determined.

The changes proposed are subject to concurrence of lines operating in eastern territories.

Marriage Aid to Education

Former Nebraska Man Finds It Easier to Work Way When Wedded.

Chicago, April 23.—The chap who works his way through college and is really anxious to get something out of his work should get married right at the start. It's the necessary stabilizing influence—takes the worry off his mind and gives him time to think.

This is the formula for success in school work prescribed by Merwyn Heald, engineering student at Northwestern university. To back up his claims that matrimony "makes a man," Heald points to a third scholarship record shattered by him. For three seasons he has been supreme, finishing the last semester with an average of 94.2 per cent.

To show that when a fellow gets down to business and studies in a home of his own he is able to concentrate as never before Heald points to a 3-month-old babe. The baby, he says, has been broadcasting a program all its own for several weeks, but even that bothers this student not in the least when he becomes engrossed in his studies.

"I'm going to school now as a business," Heald said in discussing his successes. "When I went before it was merely a pastime. 'It's the best thing that ever happened to me in the way of getting a college education—getting married.'"

"The only place to study is in a home of your own. I went to Nebraska university. I was single then. I was a 'fraternity' man. I soon found that a 'frat' house doesn't settle down until after midnight.

Then you can settle down and study. "Now my work is all over and I am in bed at that hour. Get married—and you're stabilized. You have a serious attitude toward your work." Heald admits that if there was a lack of co-operation in his household things might not run so smoothly. But there is no such lack, he says—and proudly. Never does he have to wear out one carpet singing the baby to sleep when he should be at his school work. That his wife should take care of that end of the work was agreed to long ago, Heald says.

Ailing Children Get Well on Syrup Pepsin

A small dose at bedtime brings relief and laughter by morning. ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

HOSPITAL and doctor's records prove that 75 per cent of human illness has its origin in the intestinal canal, complicated with what is commonly called constipation. Realizing what that figure means, mothers should contrive methods of handling their children while they still control them that will prevent these future dangers. Teach children regularity of bowel movement, and be especially watchful of young girls. Insist on two passages a day until the age of 18, when one is usually sufficient. Give plenty of oranges and apples, plenty of butter because it lubricates the intestines, and encourage the drinking of water.

If you detect restlessness, belching, gas or wind on the stomach, sleeplessness, or lack of appetite, examine the tongue and you will find it coated, accompanied by unpleasant breath. The child is listless, constipated. According to age, give from one-half to a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate trial. Write me before to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Syrup Pepsin, which children never object to taking as they like the taste. By morning the youngster will be well again. Likewise of the nostrils are stuffed up or there is persistent sneezing, a dose of Syrup Pepsin will break up the fever and cold.
