

7-Day Plan for Church Is Discussed

National Church Leaders Confer With Local Clergy on Extending Service and Influence.

Members of the Protestant clergy here were in conference yesterday with national leaders of church work, discussing plans for making the church a "seven-day-a-week work shop."

Dr. Worth M. Tippy, national secretary of the commission on social service of the Federal Council of Churches, is directing the conference. He is being assisted by national leaders of several of the larger church denominations.

Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, national secretary for social service for Protestant Episcopal churches, together with J. C. Stephens, industry secretary of the Y. M. C. A., inspected the city jail yesterday.

Recommendations Made. Dr. Tippy said the following recommendations would be made in connection with city jails:

Examination and detention hospitals for men as well as women who are infected with social diseases.

Workhouses for prisoners where they can earn pay for their dependents.

Cells with plenty of light and room for exercise.

Privacy, especially for women.

Fair treatment for all.

"We have made a thorough study of the church and its functions and have many suggestions to make which we hope will be carried out by the clergy," said Dr. Tippy. He listed the following:

Seven-day-a-week church for religious worship; religious education; leisure time programs; all-week service to community and world.

Community building should be erected in connection with church where activities can be carried on properly.

Departments Needed.

Church should be departmentalized the same as industries, with a staff of paid workers surrounding the minister.

Well housed churches among the working classes where the working man can receive the same religious training in the same way as anyone else.

Closer contact in work between church and jails. Preachers should grasp the opportunity of trying to save "first-timers." In connection with this subject, Dr. Tippy said: "A large percentage of persons in jail are innocent. It is the first opportunity of the clergy with persons who may become criminals. The jail has been badly neglected by the church."

It should be the function of the church to inculcate the moral principles of religion into industry. Future industry will be based on righteousness, service and co-operation.

"A worker has the right to a voice in industry and has a right to some effective and organized way of expressing his judgment in connection with hours, labor conditions and wages. Future industry will make a partner of the laborer and he will suffer the losses and share in the profits."

Business Men Backing Legion

Omahans Enthused Over Prospect of Bringing National Convention Here.

A resolution asking for a special committee to inquire into the advisability of bringing the 1925 National American Legion convention to Omaha will be introduced at the meeting of the executive committee of the Douglas county legion next Tuesday noon.

"Quite a stir was caused by the announcement that attempts are being made to bring the national convention here," said Commander Hird Stryker. "Many business men have promised support and appear very much enthused over the project. The national convention would bring to Omaha more than 100,000 members of the legion and their friends and families."

The convention here should be even a more successful one than those held in Kansas City or New Orleans because of Omaha's central location.

"I am confident that if we get the proper financial backing we can get the convention. It will be up to the business men."

Wall Paper Exhibits Set in Place for Homes Show

Variety Program Given by WOAW

Piano, Violin and Vocal Numbers Broadcast Tuesday Night.

Variety characterized the program broadcast by station WOAW, Woodmen of the world, presented under auspices of the Omaha Printing company. Piano, violin and vocal solos abounded. Instrumental numbers by a string quartet, the Serenaders orchestra and choral numbers by the Creighton university glee club were given.

The selections by Mac Ohman, "You Belong to Me," "I Thought I'd Die," and "Agravatin Papa," pleased the listeners. A duet by Mrs. Bertha Assman and Clarence Brown, accompanied by Joseph Lumpkin, won the compliments of many auditors.

Renditions of the glee club, "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses," "The Way of the World," and "Winter Song," scored a hit as was evidenced by the avalanche of phone calls.

Violin solos by Mrs. Ernest Reese, accompanied by Mr. Reese, were also heavily showered with complimentary communications. The piano solos by Miss Jean Borglum and Ethel Gladstone were especially popular with the many fans. Mrs. Charles C. Cope, jr. was vocal with applause for her vocal renditions. She was accompanied by Madam A. M. Borglum.

Orchestrations by the Serenaders of Omaha, playing with the fingers for 1923, were greeted with many favorable remarks from listeners.
