Auditorium Is One Vast Residence

Better Homes Show to Be Formally Opened at 8 Tonight With Everything in Readiness.

Senator Howell Speaks

Omaha's Auditorium has been transformed into a palatial residence with an extravagant display of furniture and all else that is pleasing to the eye, awaiting the occupancy of Mr. and Mrs. Omaha and their guests from outstate. Mayor James C. Dahman will hang the latchkey on the outside at 8 tonight as a signal for the formal opening of the Better Homes week.

One of the first to enter will be Senator-elect R. B. Howell, who will deliver the principal address. Mayor Dahman will deliver the address of welcome.

Fit for Duke. A corps of carpenters and other workmen was employed yesterday adding the finishing touches and when they were through the building had the appearance of the mansion that is to be occupied by the duke and duchess of York when they return from their honeymoon.

Exhibits were in place showing about every method of making a home a better place in which to live. As one enters one beholds a wonderful garden scene, and is apt to find a secluded nook where Mr. and Mrs. Omaha can forget their troubles and discuss buying essentials and luxuries for putting their house in order.

Lectures Given. After the mayor and Nebraska's newest senator perform the official ceremony of welcoming and receiving the guests lectures will be given by Evelyn Hansen on "Color Harmony in Dress," and by Hunt Cook on "The Livable Living Room."

Forty women members of the home economics division of the Omaha Woman's club will attend the exposition in a body Wednesday afternoon.

The admission to the show is 25 cents, including war tax. The exhibition will be open afternoons and evenings this week. No articles will be on sale.

Must Lay Down Arms, Edict to De Valera

Dublin, April 29.—De Valera must surrender, and the irregular bands must lay down arms, give up their ammunition and give in unconditionally.

Paris Hoots at London's Claim of New Style Center

American Women Who Wear French Creations Are Best Dressed Class in World, Noted Fashion Authorities Declare—Germans Worst Garbed, With English Running Close Second.

By Universal Service. Paris, April 29.—London's claim to the title of new style center is met with absolute disdain by the dress-making world of Paris. The claim of the British metropolis, which was based on the fact that the duchess of York's trousseau and the other wonderful dresses worn at the British royal wedding, were made and designed in London along lines entirely different from those prevailing in Paris, is ridiculed by style creators here.

"The best dressed woman in the world is the American woman, who wears Paris styles. The worst dressed woman in the world are the Germans, with the English a close second."

Thus declared Jean Gabriel Dornier, famous society painter, whose portraits with exclusive dress designs fetch fabulous sums. He continued: "American women are the most graceful because they incorporate the grace of their ancestors who were wild men a bare two centuries ago."

Germans Too Dumpy. "The Germans are too dumpy and do not care about their shoes, while the English women are too raw-boned and mannish."

"The most expensive gown in the average English woman resembles a sack. The French woman would be the best dresser, but on the average they are too small and they use too much make-up."

Senator Nelson Dies Suddenly on Board Train

Minnesota Man, Oldest Member of Senate, Expires En Route to Chicago—Served 28 Years.

Philadelphia, April 29.—The Pennsylvania railroad reported that United States Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota died on a train en route from Washington to Chicago.

According to the railroad company, Senator Nelson was found dead on the train which left Washington at 6:50. The company arranged to have the body taken from the train at Philadelphia.

Death was due to heart failure. The train crew said that as the train was passing through Timonium, Md., 11 miles from Baltimore, the senator had an attack of angina pectoris and died in a few minutes.

With the senator at the time of his death were his niece, Mrs. Edith Truscott of Jennings Lodge, Ore.; George W. Wells, jr., insurance commissioner of Minnesota, and Walker W. Beford, deputy insurance commissioner of Minnesota.

Oldest Member of Senate. Washington, April 29.—The death of Knute Nelson, senior senator from Minnesota, abroad a train en route to Chicago, removed from the senate its oldest member and one of those with the longest service record. He was 89 years of age and had served 28 years in the senate.

Senator Nelson, although ill last winter with influenza, was active during the last session of congress, and today, when he left Washington, for his home, he appeared in excellent health, although the death of his wife a year ago had greatly depressed him.

Those who were closest to him said he never fully recovered from that blow. Senator Nelson was a civil war veteran and worked hard, especially during the war, in pushing legislation dealing with Americanization. The espionage was one of the bills he fought for. He was chairman of the judiciary committee, and a member of the commerce committee. He reported the Dyer anti-lynching bill, which failed of passage and the child labor constitutional amendment.

Under the rules of seniority, Senator Dillingham, republican of Vermont, would succeed to the chairmanship of the judiciary committee.

Senator Nelson's present term would have expired in 1925. President Harding received the news of the death of Senator Nelson while attending the dinner of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and immediately issued a statement saying that the Minnesota senator was "a stalwart American and performed a most useful public service with a record of great work accomplished."

Anna Greco, 14, May Die From Wounds Inflicted by Jim Corbino, Who Breaks Into Room.

Parent Is Shot, Slashed

Anna Greco, 14, 2166 North Fifteenth street, was shot and probably fatally wounded and her father, Alfred Greco, was seriously wounded Saturday by Jim Corbino, 30, Havelock, lover of the girl. The shooting took place in the bedroom occupied by Anna after Corbino, who had climbed through a window of the room, had been repulsed in his plea that she elope with him.

Corbino, according to the story the Greco girl told police, has been an admirer of Anna for more than two years. Several months ago he proposed marriage to her and she accepted him. Mr. and Mrs. Greco refused to allow their daughter to marry until she became of age. Corbino, at that time, agreed and declared he would wait.

Every Saturday Corbino came to Omaha from Havelock, where he is employed as a bootmaker in the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad shops, to see Anna. Since Anna had accepted his proposal of marriage he has written her almost daily. The letters were all addressed to Miss Anna Greco, but each one was headed "My Dear Wife" and closed "Your Loving Husband." All of these letters were found by the detectives when they searched the room after the shooting.

Enters Girl's Room. Last night Corbino came to Omaha as usual, but did not go direct to the Greco home. Shortly after 10 Anna retired, declaring she believed Corbino would not call. Less than one hour later Corbino came to the house, climbed to the roof of the front porch and into the open window of the girl's room.

Anna was asleep when he entered, and cried out when he awakened her. The cry aroused her father who was sleeping in an adjacent room and frightened Corbino.

Corbino asked the girl if she would run away with him to get married. She refused, declaring that her parents did not want her to marry until she was older. Corbino then began to threaten her and declared that he would kill her if she did not do as he requested.

Before Anna could answer him, her father entered the room. Seeing Corbino standing near the bed, he asked why he was there. Corbino did not answer. He drew an automatic pistol from his pocket, turned to the girl and opened fire.

Girl Shot Seven Times. Two bullets struck the girl in the right hand, one in the left arm, two in the left breast and one in the thigh. Corbino then turned the pistol on Alfred Greco and shot him once in the right hand and once in the leg.

He emptied his pistol, discarded it and drew a knife. Greco and Corbino fought for several moments for possession of the knife but Greco was weakened from the two wounds he had received and was unable to fight off the younger man. Corbino slashed him across the chest, cutting a gash from his right shoulder to his left hip.

Greco fell when Corbino stabbed him. Corbino leaped through the window and made his escape in the railroad yards a short distance away.

Mrs. Greco, aroused by the shooting and the noise of the fighting, ran to Anna's room. She arrived in time to see Corbino strike down her husband and escape. She rushed to her daughter, who lay moaning on the bed, stepping over the body of her husband. Her screams attracted neighbors, who called police.

Condition Serious. The police took Anna and her father to St. Joseph's hospital. Dr. Lovely, acting police surgeon, declared there is a slight chance of Anna recovering and that Greco's life would be in danger for some time.

Detectives William Davis and Frank Killian, accompanied by Emergency Driver Al Nelson, found the pistol used by Corbino in Anna's bed, where Corbino had thrown it when he drew the knife. A thorough search of the railroad yards failed to reveal Corbino. Police have requested Lincoln authorities to watch trains entering Havelock.

Although the letters Corbino wrote to the girl were headed "My dear wife," the girl and her family deny that they were married. Anna Greco called for a priest as soon as she was taken off the operating table at the hospital and, in his presence, told her story to police and asked that the last sacrament be given her.

Alfred Greco refused to talk of the affair. He told the priest that he "was not going to die."

Red Flag to Fly Over Union Labor in Germany May 1

Millions to Gather in Street Mass Meetings Tuesday—Officials Fear Bloodshed in Berlin.

Berlin, April 29.—May 1 will be an absolute holiday in Germany. Organized labor, together with the socialist and communist parties, will call out millions in street mass meetings Tuesday, under the symbol of the red flag.

Bavaria is the only state which has forbidden the carrying of the red and socialist flags because of the fear that it would produce clashes between the fascist and the socialist and communist elements in Munich. Munich has also forbidden the parades of the mass meetings through the streets of the city.

In Berlin both the Prussian and central governments express the fear that the day will not be wholly without the spilling of blood, and extraordinary precautions are being taken to prevent clashes between the nationalist elements and the socialists and communists.

Will March Together. For the first time the hitherto moderate socialists have agreed to march with the extremists and communists under the red flag and the soviet banners, to the exclusion of the colors of the republic.

Much significance is attached to this lineup of the moderates with the extreme radicals. The alleged discovery of a new plot to assassinate the socialist Prussian Minister of the Interior Severing by nationalist elements is creating another flurry among the police. Severing is being constantly guarded.

Rumors of Coup. Sensational rumors are current in Berlin that Adolf Hitler will attempt a coup d'etat at Munich Tuesday. This was denied in official government quarters at Munich upon telephone inquiry today.

Ferry Boat Aground. Ogdenburg, N. Efforts immediately were begun to float it. A crew of five and 14 passengers were aboard.

200 German War Widows to Establish Colony in State of Sonora, Mexico By Universal Service. Washington, April 29.—Two hundred German war widows have made arrangements with the Mexican government to establish a colony in the state of Sonora. Notice to this effect was received at the Mexican embassy here today from its foreign office.

The women have been given an extensive tract of land for their colonization experiment by the Mexican government, which has agreed to cooperate with them in other ways, in the project. They are for the most part wives of German farmers, they stated, and thus have an intimate knowledge of the scientific farming practiced in Germany. The colony will, at the beginning, be comprised entirely of women. It is understood, however, they contemplate forming matrimonial alliances with the Mexican residents of Sonora from time to time, thus introducing a strong strain of German blood into that section of Mexico.

Sebastano Mangenmeli Near Death After Wounded by Walter Lawrence, Who Demanded Liquor.

Neighborhood Incensed

Sebastano Mangenmeli, 1117 North Seventeenth street, was shot and possibly fatally wounded by Walter Lawrence, 1722 1-2 Cumming street, at 5 yesterday afternoon. Mangenmeli was sitting in front of his poolroom at 1624 Nicholas street at the time of the shooting, which was declared by witnesses to have been without provocation.

Lawrence escaped after the shooting and, though captured by John Feduni, 1114 North Seventeenth street, after a short chase, managed to overpower Feduni and escape a second time. He later was captured by police when he went to Mercy hospital, 2461 Patrick avenue, to have his jaw, which had been broken in three places during his fight with Feduni, set.

Demands Drinks. The shooting occurred while Mangenmeli was waiting for his little girl to come call him to supper. Lawrence, who witnesses say was drunk, demanded a drink from Mangenmeli. "I have nothing to drink," Mangenmeli answered. "If I had I would give it to you."

"You are a liar," Lawrence said. Then he drew a revolver and opened fire. The first shot went wild, the second struck Mangenmeli in the right chest and turned him around. He was only a short distance behind Lawrence when he entered Fifteenth street and disappeared in a house. Feduni rushed out of his house in time to see Lawrence fire the last shot and run away. Feduni, unarmed, gave chase to the fleeing man. He was only a short distance behind Lawrence when he entered the house near Fourteenth street.

Fence Halts Assault. Lawrence passed through the house and out the rear door, with Feduni hot after him. Then the chase turned down an alley and on toward the railroad track. Lawrence's flight was stopped by a high fence and he turned and faced his pursuer. Before Lawrence could raise his weapon to fire at Feduni, Feduni had closed with him and was fighting for possession of the revolver. Feduni grasped the gun in one hand and struck Lawrence in the face with the other. Lawrence was knocked down and lost his grip on the revolver. He leaped to his feet with a brick in his hand, and before Feduni could ward off the blow Lawrence had hit him in the head.

Lawrence told the police that he had run down the railroad yards some distance when he escaped from Feduni, who he described as a "hard guy," and then doubled back and went to his home. His wife wanted to know what the trouble was, and he told her that he had been hurt in a fight.

Mrs. Lawrence helped her husband and was present when he escaped from shooting. When the officers declared that he would have to go with them, she expressed a desire to go, too. She went with her husband to Lord Lester hospital, where he is being held under guard.

The entire district about Seventeenth street from Leard to Charles streets, was incensed over the shooting. Friends of Mangenmeli packed the street in front of the Frederick hospital, waiting for word about his condition.

Chinese Leaders Opposed to Force By Associated Press. Hongkong, April 29.—Wang Chung-hui, former premier of China, returned today from delivering at Canton a personal message from President Li Yuan-hung to Sun Yat-sen, southern constitutional leader and former president of the southern republic.

In his final interview with Sun Yat-sen, Wang handed him a statement in which he declared he had decided to go broad because he could see no prospect of the reunification of China. His visit to Canton, however, opened new vistas, he said, and he found that Sun, like himself, did not believe that force was the best method of resolving the doubts and contentions of the nations.
