EDDIE'S FRIENDS

Willie Lewis Training Johnson For Next Saturday's Bout With Willard at Yankee Stadium

Fighter Who Helped Develop Most of the Best Boxers of France, Including Carpentier, Handling Young Iowan for Saturday's Fight.

By DAMON RUNYON. Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WILLIE LEWIS has been training and coaching Floyd Johnson, the young Iowan heavy-weight, at his quarters in Yonkers, for the past week.

This is some thing of great interest. It may have important bearing on Johnson's fight with Jess Willard at the New York Milk fund show at the Yankee stadium next Saturday.

Lewis is teaching Young Johnson how to hit with his right hand, how to hammer an opponent's body with deadly effect.

Lewis has been working quietly—almost secretly—with his pupil. He must be satisfied with Johnson's progress, as he has told his friends to look for a huge surprise when Johnson faces Willard.

Willie Lewis in his heyday as a fighter—lightweight, welter and middleweight, was a great hitter with his right hand.

He was a smart boxer—he had boxers' brains. He began very young and before he finally retired he had fought some of the best men in the world in three different divisions.

He has a marvelous memory. He can sit down with you today, recall every fight he ever had and tell you exactly what happened, how and why it happened.

Lewis was one of the first American fighters to visit France. He spent some years in Paris, fought all over Europe, and helped develop most of the best of the French boxers, including Carpentier.

Lewis and Charlie Cook, manager of Johnson, are close friends. After Johnson's fight with Fred Fulton in Jersey City, Cook asked Lewis to take charge of the Iowan and prepare him for the Willard fight, and as a matter of friendship, Lewis agreed.

That is why you find Willie in Johnson's camp, schooling the young fellow.

Johnson has youth, speed, strength and the rarest of all traits in these big fighters—absolute gameness. He demonstrated that in his fight with Fulton.

He demonstrated in his fight with Fulton, with Joe McCann, with Bob Martin, with Bill Brennan and others that he can take tremendous punishment.

But he also demonstrated in some of these fights that he has not quite picked up the knack of hitting.

Johnson is a good fighter—make no error there. He has come down in front in 15 consecutive battles since he came east.

He has fought and defeated Bob Martin, Bill Brennan and Fred Fulton, and is now going against Jess Willard, four reasonably rugged opponents to be tossed at a youngster in 10 months.

ONE OF OURS

By WILLA CATHER. Famous Nebraska Author.

SYNOPSIS.

Claude Wheeler, son of a Nebraska rancher, finds no realization of his dreams in wedded life with Edith Royce, religiously cold daughter of Jason Royce, a Frankfort (Neb.) miller. She, after a year, leaves him for a young man, a missionary, is ill during her absence. Claude joins the army officers' training camp. While attending a small denominational college in Lincoln, where he spent three years, he became a friend of the French family, consisting of a motherly widow and her five sons. Claude has friends in Ernest Havel and Leonard Dawson, young Nebraska farmers who have bought property on which Claude built a home for his bride. He has an elder brother, Bayles, an insurance salesman, a younger brother, Ralph, a young man on leave of absence from camp in the east. Claude finds the French family home on Nat, and a younger brother, Ralph, his mother interesting. The son, Claude Farmer, high school friend of his wife. On board a transport to Europe one of Claude's cabin mates died late in the afternoon. Victor Morse, he, with the air of an Englishman, has served in the army flying corps and is returning to the front from the United States, where he was with him, and also with Albert Usher, a young marine from Wyoming.

Steady nerves depend on the condition of your blood

YOU know that! You also know that your loved ones' sympathies and comfort will not correct the cause. Neither can impoverished blood rebuild the body.

Mr. W. T. Hooker, 2321 Proctor St., Port Arthur, Texas, writes: "I suffered from Eczema for seven years and was afflicted with nervousness. I tried S.S.S. and six bottles cured me. My new skin is healthy and bright. S.S.S. the only sure cure for blood disorders on the market."

few men who were left on deck felt that no good could come out of a sky like that. They wished they were at home, in France, anywhere but here.

CHAPTER VI.

The next morning Dr. Trueman asked Claude to help him at sick call. "I've got a bunch of sergeants taking temperatures, but it's too much for one man to cover—so I don't want to ask anything of those due officers who sit in there playing poker all the time. Either they've got no conscience or they're not awake to the gravity of the situation."

The doctor stood on deck in his raincoat, his foot on the rail to keep his equilibrium, writing on his knee as the long string of men came up to him. There were more than 70 in the line that morning, and some of them looked as if they ought to be in a drier place. Rain beat down on the sea like lead bullets. The old Archives floundered from one gray to another, but he kept on writing off the cheering sight of the sick ships. The doctor had to leave his post from time to time, when a sickener got the better of his will. Claude, at his elbow, was noting down names and temperatures. In the middle of his work he told the sergeants to manage without him for a few minutes. Down near the end of the line he had seen one of his own men misconducting himself, sniveling and crying like a baby—a fine, bushy boy of 18 who had never given any trouble. Claude made a dash for him and clapped him on the shoulder.

"No, sir. I can't eat the awful stuff on this boat."

"I can't help it, lieutenant," the boy blubbered. "I've kept it back just as long as I can. I can't hold it any longer."

"What's the matter with you? Come over here and sit down on this box and tell me."

"Private Fuller willingly let himself be led, and dropped on the box. "I'm so sick, lieutenant."

"I'll see how sick you are," Claude stuck a thermometer into his mouth, and while he waited sent the deck steward to bring a cup of tea. "I thought Fuller. You're not half a degree of fever. You're scared, and that's all. Now drink this tea. I expect you didn't eat any breakfast."

"No, sir. I can't eat the awful stuff on this boat."

"It is pretty bad. Where are you from?"

"I'm from P.P. Pleasantville, up on the P.P. Plate," the boy gulped, and his tears began to flow afresh.

"Well, now, what would you think of you, back there? I suppose they got the band out and made a fuss over you when you went away, and thought they were sending off a fine soldier. And I've always thought you'd be a first-rate soldier. I guess we'll forget about this. You feel better already, don't you?"

"Yes, sir. This tastes awful good. I've been so sick to my stomach, and last night I got pains in my chest. All my crowd is a-crying, and you look big Tamnhauser. I mean corporal, away to the hospital. It looks like we're all going to die out here."

"I know it's a hard glory, but don't you shame me before these English stewards."

"I won't do it again, sir," he promised.

Huge Lamp to Be Exhibited Here

30,000-Watt Light, Largest in World, to Be Shown at Convention.

A 30,000-watt incandescent lamp—the largest in the world—will be shown in Omaha Thursday and Friday at the convention of the Nebraska section of the National Electric Light association, to be held at Hotel Fontenelle.

The lamp is 12 inches in diameter and is 18 1/2 inches high. It furnishes light equal to the combined light from 2,400 electric lamps of the average size used in the home. The filament is made of tungsten wire one-tenth of an inch in diameter and 93 inches long, constructed in four coils.

The wattage of this lamp is 1,200 times larger than the average lamp, and under the 5 1/2-cent rate of the Nebraska Power company it would cost more than $1.50 an hour to operate. The lamp must be lighted, because of its size, from a 120-volt 250-ampere circuit.

Thirteen of these lamps have been made for use in moving picture studios.

"These lamps are the nearest approach to sunlight ever made," said J. E. Davidson, general manager of the Nebraska Power company and vice president of the National Electric Light association.

Representative light and power men from all parts of the state will be here for the convention. A dinner for the guests will be given Friday night.
