In going down by a score of 2 up and 1 to play this afternoon, Ouimet for the third time in his life failed to achieve his ambition to win the British amateur title. Before he fell he eliminated the pet of the English gallery, Cyril Tolley. In beating Tolley this morning in the sixth round Ouimet gave a magnificent display of artistic perfection in the strokes for which he long has been famous

But the Bostonian's artistry had deserted him, his shots were bereft of the supreme playing that made his forenoon effort so bright and beautiful and he was trounced by a man who played golf that was only ordinary for one with such a reputation as Wethered enjoys. To meet and defeat in one day such masters of match play as Tolley and Wethered was a terrible task to set for anyone. It was one for which Ouimet lacked sufficient stamina to fulfill. Through poor putting Ouimet was four down by the time he reached the 13th green. Here, he rallied and tried bravely to avoid the inevitable. He succeeded in winning the 14th and 15th holes and barely missed winning the 16th where his putt delicately curved to dodge a quarter stymie sticking on the lip, ran over the rim of the cup and refused to

Wethered was beginning to play loosely but he had played surely and steadily that first hour and a half when Ouimet had wobbled and wavered, particularly from the cups, and the young Englishman fairly deserved his victory. Cheer When Ouimet Misses. The gallery had so eagerly been wanting Wethered to win that many members of it even cheered when Ouimet missed a putt, his third one, on the ninth hole and Wethered went This display of questionable manners somewhat affected Ouimet's temper, but the brisk and
