

WOAW Station to Broadcast in Airplane Test Ship at Buffalo to Try for Altitude While Receiving Program from Omaha.

Test to determine the feasibility of receiving radio messages aboard airplanes will be made this morning, with WOAW as the broadcasting station.

An airplane will take off from Buffalo, N. Y., at 8 this morning, ascending by spirals over the city and Lake Erie, in an attempt to set an altitude record. The plane will be equipped with radio receiving apparatus to determine what difference, if any, various altitudes will make in the receiving of messages.

Orson Stiles, chief clerk to W. A. Fraser, sovereign commander of the Woodman of the World, in whose building station WOAW is located, stated that the following message was received Saturday from the Howell Electric company at Buffalo, promoters of the test.

"We are all set to go. Have one piece of extra heavy brass music."

Vocal and instrumental music will be broadcast from the Omaha station by the Rialto theater orchestra, under direction of Julius K. Johnson, starting at 8 this morning. The program will last for one hour or more. The Omaha station was selected to do the broadcasting because of its central location.

Results of the test will be signaled from the plane to observers on the ground equipped with telescopes and thence transmitted to the Omaha station.

Wingham Explains Workings of Stockyards

Stockyards Company Merely "Bridge" Between Railroads and Final Buyer, Declares Vice President, Who Fails to See Harm in Armour-Morris Merger.

"The actual workings of a large stockyard, where a livestock market is maintained, probably is less understood than almost any other public utility," said Everett Wingham, vice president and executive officer of the Omaha Union Stockyards company.

"Many people believe that the Stockyards company employs the commission men, buys livestock for the packers, and that it has, in a general way, control over prices paid for livestock. But such is not the case. The Stockyards company simply provides the facilities and service for the accommodation of livestock from the time railroads deliver the shipments at the market until they pass into the hands of the buyer — be he shipper, feeder-buyer or packer; in other words, it is simply the bridge over which livestock passes from the railroads to the final buyer, whether it is the local packer who buys for slaughter, or others who buy to take the stock back to the country for feeding purposes, or to ship to other markets or killing plants.

Independents Increase.

"In reference to the merger of the Armour and Morris Packing companies, I cannot see where there will be a decrease in competition or that it will in any way affect the prices received by the producers, as there are too many independent packing plants and they are springing up all the time. According to figures furnished by the stockyards packer administration, the number of independent packing plants has increased 10 per cent in the last four years.

"In addition to Armour & Co. and the Cudahy Packing company, Dold & Co., Morris & Co. and Swift & Co., there are located in South Omaha 12 smaller packing companies. The Omaha Packing company, South Omaha Packing company, Hoffman Brothers, Roth Packing company, George Hoffman, Mid-West Packing company, Pat O'Dea, Mayerowich & Vall, Higgins Packing company, M. Glassburg, J. Rife & Sons, all are buying more or less livestock on the market in competition with the larger packers, and the fact that all of them have been in operation a number of years, is the best evidence that they are not being interfered with by the larger packing companies or the Stockyards company.

Land Sold by Stockyards.

"In addition there are the Lincoln Packing company of Lincoln, Sinclair & Co. of Cedar Rapids, Ia., Morrell & Co. of Ottumwa, Ia., Odgen Packing company of Odgen, Utah, and Wilson & Co. of Chicago and Kansas City. Other competitors are J. W. Murphy and Schwartz & Son, who, combined, purchased 529,806 head of hogs at South Omaha in 1922, largely for shipment to packing companies at other points.

"The statement has been made that the larger packers, through their stockyards influence, prevent the smaller or independent packers from catering or doing business at the alleged "controlled" markets. In reference to that charge I refer to the case of Hoffman Brothers, whose packing plant was built about 10 years ago. Their building is located on land sold them by the local stockyards company. This also applies to the Mid-West Packing company, whose plant was completed and put in operation in 1918. In the case of the O'Dea Packing company, part of the land used by the plant is owned by the stockyards company and leased to O'Dea at a nominal figure.

Given Aid.

"In the case of Mayerowich & Vall, their location was traded to them by the stockyards company, for their old obsolete plant, part of which ground is now occupied by the new modern horse-sales barn. Enough money consideration was also paid Mayerowich & Vall to enable the firm to build its present modern plant. The Higgins Packing company also had an old plant located where the horse barn now is, for which it was given a good price, enabling it to put up its modern plant adjacent to the stockyards company property. The Skinner Packing company, now operated by Dold & Co., purchased a tract of land in the stockyards district and put up a fine, modern plant, while the stockyards company cheerfully went into an agreement with it to furnish a considerable portion of the driveway for livestock from the stockyards to its plant.

"The management of the stockyards, together with representatives of the Omaha Livestock exchange, have been endeavoring to get Wilson & Co. to locate at Omaha, but on account of war and after-war conditions, as well as attacks from various sources on the larger packers of which Wilson & Co. is one, nothing was accomplished. But it may come yet and it keeps a cattle buyer at the South Omaha market."

In England it costs as high as 700 pounds in fees and stamp duties to become a duke.

Two Brownings Held for Trial in Murder Case

Judge Binds Defendants Over to District Court on Second Degree Charge — Bonds $25,000 Each.

Salt Lake City, May 12.—Holding that the slaying of Benjamin F. Ballantyne at his home here April 9, was not committed with premeditation, nor could it be attributed to self-defense, City Judge Noel S. Pratt today bound over Marriner A. and John M. Brownings, Jr., defendants, to the district court on charges of second degree murder.

Bond for the defendants was fixed at $25,000 each.

Thirty minutes later the Brownings were enroute to their home in Ogden, the bonds for $50,000 having been signed by the fathers of the two accused men, M. H. Browning, father of Marriner and John M. Browning, Sr., the noted inventor, father of John Browning.

The defense attempted to bring out that the killing of Ballantyne was "justifiable homicide," while the prosecution endeavored to show that Ballantyne was killed "with malice aforethought" and hence the defendants should be bound over on a first degree murder charge.

Judge Pratt declared that from the evidence he could not justify either
