

N. Y. Repeal of Dry Law Worry to President

Declares It's Likely to Result in Conflict Between State and Federal Authorities.

Newburg, N. Y., May 16.—"Repeal of state prohibition enforcement statute will be likely to result in more or less conflict between state and federal authorities," in the opinion of President Harding. The views of the president were expressed in a letter to Wesley Wait of this city, made public today. A bill passed by the legislature repealing the act is awaiting action by Governor Smith.

Mr. Wait wrote to the president urging that if Governor Smith would sign the bill congress should be convened and that the governor and members of the legislature who voted for the bill should be suspended.

"Every state official who voted for this bill is subject to the law of treason, having taken the oath to sustain the constitution of the United States," Mr. Wait's letter said.

In reply President Harding wrote:

"Pending the approval of the Culler bill by Governor Smith this matter is hardly to be regarded as having reached the stage where any federal authority is called upon for a determination of national policies. With much of what you say I am fully in accord. Mr. Lincoln said at the time when slavery was still a recognized, established and accepted institution throughout a considerable part of the union that the nation could not exist half slave and half free. That expression has been accepted ever since as presenting the obvious and conclusive logic of the situation which then confronted the union. Certainly it would have been still more impressive if there had been at that time a constitutional provision against slavery as there is now a constitutional provision against the liquor traffic.

Law of the Land.

"The nation has deliberately, after many years of consideration, adopted the present policy which is written into the 18th amendment. It is law of the land and in every state in the union. So long as it remains the national policy there can be only one course for the national government to pursue. That is to use every means to make effective the law passed in compliance with this constitutional mandate. To do this will be the unquestioning policy of the present administration, and I may add that I am firmly convinced that it must be the policy of the administration that shall come hereafter.

"The executive of the nation, and equally the executives of the states, are sworn to enforce the constitution. It is difficult to believe that public approval will ever be given to any other than a policy of fully and literally discharging this duty. It does not seem fitting, however, to enter upon a discussion of a situation which has not yet arisen. It will be obvious that many complex and extremely difficult situations must arise if any of the states shall decline to assume their part of the responsibility of maintaining the constitution and the laws enacted in pursuance of it. The states are equipped with police organizations and judicial establishments adequate to deal with such problems. The federal government is not thus equipped.

"I venture that if by reason of the refusal or failure of any state to discharge its proper duty in such connection the federal government is at length compelled to enter upon the territory and jurisdiction of the state and to set up those police and judicial authorities which would be required, the most difficult and trying situations would inevitably arise. More or less conflict between state and federal authorities would seem unavoidable in such circumstances. The impression would be created that the federal government was assuming to interfere with the functions of the states, and the distressing results that would ensue readily suggest themselves."

Another Girl Hiker Goes Through Omaha

She Hopes to Get as Far as Grand Island Tonight

Myrtle "Bobbie" Kruger, 18, of Chicago, arrived in Omaha yesterday on foot on her way to Zortman, Mont.

She was attired in a suit of khaki knickers, walking shoes and a boy's cap over black bobbed hair, all more or less begrimed. She presented her sparkling brown eyes and uplifted nose at police station yesterday morning and asked permission of Police Matron Gibbons to "wash up." Permission was granted.

She started from Chicago last Friday, she said, with a girl named Anne Hogan, to walk to Shelby, Mont., to see the Gibbons-Dempsey fight. Miss Hogan, however, fell by the wayside. Miss Kruger is the first fight fan pilgrim to pass through Omaha on her way to the fight here.

She left shortly after noon, headed westward, expecting to make Grand Island, Neb., by nightfall.

Fifth Attempt Wins Citizenship

Wounded War Vet Given Aid by Omaha American Legion.

Hatze Diamantis, 4826 South Twenty-sixth street, a Greek, and a veteran of the world war, was granted citizenship papers in District Judge Day's court yesterday morning. It was his fifth attempt to obtain naturalization.

Diamantis was born in Smyrna, Greece, and came to America in January, 1914. He enlisted in the United States army at the outbreak of the war, and was wounded in France.

When he returned he applied for naturalization under the act of congress of July, 1915, which gave former service men special rights, but was denied, due to the fact that his wife and two children were in Greece, and his naturalization would have made the United States responsible for their welfare.

The American Legion of which Diamantis is a member, took an interest in his case, and learned that while one of his children was killed

In a massacre, his wife and the other child is still alive. Diamantis plans as possible, although he has not been able to communicate with them to bring them to this country as soon as some time.
