

Home Building Shows Increase Over Nebraska

Building and Loan Associations Find State Prosperous — Old Officers — Are Re-Elected.

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Fremont, Neb., May 17.—T. L. Madson, president of the Nebraska League of Savings and Loan Associations at the 33rd annual convention of that body held here. Other officials returned to office are Paul W. Kuhns, Omaha, first vice president; Frank B. Sidles, Lincoln, second vice president; C. W. Brininger, Grand Island, third vice president; T. J. Fitzmorris, Omaha, secretary and treasurer. The election of delegates to the national convention and the location of the next state meeting was left with the executive committee.

The committee will be named to study the laws that will further safeguard home owners and savers. It was recommended that the trade and commerce department issue a new pamphlet on building and saving laws.

Loomis Reviews Work. George W. Loomis, chairman of the board of directors of the Omaha Building and Loan association, reviewed the work of that organization for the past 40 years, during which time he has been an active member.

E. Harrington, Lancaster county representative, reviewed the work of the last legislature in connection with the building and loan associations. E. L. Hevelone, Beatrice, chairman of the legislative committee, reported on the results accomplished during the session.

The secretary's report showed that satisfactory conditions exist in the Nebraska field, that money is plentiful and that home building is active. Unusual activities are noticeable in Omaha, Lincoln, Fremont, Grand Island, Beatrice and North Platte.

Report Shows Growth. In part the secretary's report said: "On the first of the year reports from associations representing 84 per cent of the total resources in the state, show a gain of $4,743,000 for the first half of the fiscal year. Should this rate of gain hold good with associations not reporting, and continue through the first half of 1923, it will mean an all around increase of 11 per cent in resources, carrying the total for the state well over the one hundred million mark at the close of the fiscal year on June 30, next."

"During the fiscal year the association distributed among their 147,456 share holders in cash or credits, $4,537,750. Borrowing members number $6,823, about one-third of all. The reserve fund required by law totals $2,423,736, or 3.2 per cent of the mortgage loans. During the 12 months, $892,590 was credited to the reserve fund, while the charge against that fund was only $18,792 or 6-10ths of 1 per cent.

"In the same time the aggregate receipts and disbursements were $59,000,000 and this huge volume of business was handled with an insignificant loss. Even the total sum involved in mortgages being foreclosed is less than the sum carried to the reserve during the fiscal year."

she'll come back after a while," said Boxer.

But Woolf Woolf didn't come back that day. She didn't come back the next day. On the third day Boxer tried to find her. He wandered about this way and that way, all through the Green Forest, but never once did he get so much as a glimpse of Woolf Woolf. He found places where she had been. He found old logs she had pulled over, and rotted old stumps she had torn apart. But that was all he did find.

The fact is, Woolf Woolf had left the Green Forest. She had gone up to the Big Woods on the Great Mountain. She had parted from Boxer for good and all. Probably this parting would have taken place soon even if Boxer hadn't had that trouble with Jimmy Skunk. You see, he had gone out into the Green World. It was the time which comes to all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. That was one reason why Mother Bear had driven Boxer and Woolf Woolf away, and told them never to come back. She had known that it was time for them to take care of themselves.

Perhaps Boxer wouldn't have minded so much had it not been that he couldn't get away from Jimmy Skunk's dreadful scent. Day by day it grew less and less, but it was with him for a long time. Whenever there was a damp, wet day, it became worse. "If only I could run away from it," Boxer kept saying over and over again. "If only I could run away from it." But, of course, he couldn't. He carried it right along with him.

have the path," said Boxer over and over to himself.

Even Woolf Woolf, Boxer's twin sister, would have nothing to do with him. She wouldn't let him come anywhere near her. She told him very plainly that he had been served just right, and that she hoped it would be a lesson to him. She told him that he had been altogether too conceited, and that she hoped that now he would remember some of the things Mother Bear had told them when they were little. Then she said goodby.

"Where are you going?" whined Boxer. "I don't know, but I'm going somewhere where the air will be sweet and pleasant," retorted Woolf Woolf and shuffled off.

Boxer wanted to follow her, but he hadn't the courage to. You see, he felt too much ashamed. He tried to tell himself that he didn't care, but he knew this wasn't true. "Anyway,
