Detroit, May 26 .- Evidences of a small decline in automobile produc tion were noted during the week. Al though demand continues in excess of supply, manufacturers generally are off their factory schedules to slightly lower levels than will be maintained right through the summer, according to present prospects. From the first of the year produc tion has soared steadily upward until the middle of the present, month when it reached the peak. The usual seasonal slowing down takes place about May 1 but the insistent plea. for cars this year, compelled manufacturers to push production to the utmost at that time instead of tapering off
