

Jewel Bandits Steal $200,000 Pearl Necklace

Wife of American Steel Baron Robbed in Europe—String Consists of 130 Perfectly Matched Gems.

London, June 8.—International jewel bandits are believed to be back of the baffling mystery of the disappearance of a $200,000 pearl necklace stolen from Mrs. Maybelle Gilman Corey, wife of William E. Corey, steel baron, on a trip from Paris to London.

Mrs. W. E. Corey

Scotland Yard and the police of the continent began a roundup of known jewel thieves, when the Yard was notified of the sensational theft.

Mrs. Corey, who is planning to return to Paris, June 15, to meet her husband, who is now en route to Europe, is broken-hearted over the loss of the precious string.

"My husband gave me the necklace at Christmas, 1913," she said with tears in her eyes. "It was unrivaled in the world, consisting of 130 perfectly matched pearls.

"I am unable to tell where they were stolen, but I strongly suspect they were taken after my arrival in London. I packed them before I left my Paris home, and I carried the jewel case myself throughout the whole trip. They never left my sight.

"I arrived at the hotel Monday night. When I went to get the necklace Tuesday night, I found the jewel case was unlocked and the necklace was missing."

Had No Insurance. Mrs. Corey said the pearls were not insured.

"I always had them with me, and I never thought insurance necessary," she said.

William E. Corey's sudden rise from a $40 a month clerkship to head of the United States Steel corporation, succeeding Charles M. Schwab, was followed soon afterward by his romance with Maybelle Gilman, starting in "The Mocking Bird" on Broadway. That was about 20 years ago. The first Mrs. Corey obtained a divorce in Reno, Nev., July 30, 1905, and in May, 1907, Corey and Miss Gilman were married at an elaborate ceremony in the Hotel Gotham. They returned to a chateau in France.

It was estimated that the romance cost Corey about $5,000,000.

No fewer than 200,000 American tourists are expected to visit London this summer. It is estimated that they will spend upward of $150,000,000.

Flyers to Span U. S. in 20 Hours Alone

By International News Service. San Francisco, June 8.—When the full moon comes late this month a quiet, unassuming chap will start a flight which will be man's supreme test of domination of the air.

He is Clare K. Vance, former aviator instructor in the United States army, and one of Uncle Sam's air mail fliers.

He plans to fly from San Francisco to New York without stop in from 20 to 22 hours.

He will make the flight alone in a plane built entirely by himself. Vance is making the spectacular attempt "on his own." He is "on leave" from the air mail service and is planning the undertaking entirely under his own auspices.

Lutherans Back Prohibition Law

President of Norwegian Lutheran Says Members Should Support Act.

St. Paul, Minn., June 8.—All members of the church "as dutiful citizens should report the enforcement of the prohibition amendment, whatever may be our personal opinion regarding the law," declared Dr. H. G. Stub of St. Paul, president, in his address today at the opening session of the triennial general convention of the Norwegian Lutheran church in America.

The president in his address referred to the recommendations of the English association of the church that an English district be formed; that English be made the official language of the church and that the word "Norwegian" be dropped from the church title.

Dr. Stub endorsed the creation of an English district at large as soon as 30 congregations desire it.

The church president said he was unable to recommend adoption of the proposal that English be made the official language of the church body as the English and Norwegian languages now are placed on perfect equality as to their use in all general and district conventions.

He "respectfully suggested that this convention do not discuss the matter of a change of name."

"Enough," Says Cop Who Didn't Name Son That

Hammond, Ind., June 9.—"Enough" is the cry that has gone up from Aloysius Hart, former Hammond police officer, who thought it was a good joke when he announced that he would name his fifth son "Enough." The joke went all over the world and when Hart saw it in a London paper he declared that the thing had gone far enough. He appealed for censorship on all "Enough" items," explaining that the baby's real name is Michael George Hart.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. Pretense that you do not care Never gets you anywhere. —Mother Bear.

Littlest Bear Gets the Littlest Fish.

Littlest Bear, perched up in a tree where Mother Bear had sent her after giving her a spanking, felt that she was the most abused little Bear in all the great world. Of course, she wasn't. She had been punished for disobedience. But she didn't think about this. She had been disobedient so often without being punished that now she felt that she was abused.

Down below her she could see Brother and Sister, and she just knew that they were chuckling over her punishment. This added to her anger, for Littlest Bear really was very angry. But there was nothing she could do about it. She didn't dare come down out of that tree, so she sulked and sulked and pitied herself and tried to think that she hated everybody and everything.

Mother Bear had gone back to her fishing. Presently there was a swift movement of one of her big paws, and out on the shore came a shining, flapping fish. Mother Bear pounced on it before it could flap back into the water. Then she carried it over to Brother and Sister to be divided between them. Mother Bear went back to her fishing, while the two little Bears smacked their lips as they gobbled up that fish.

In a little while the same thing happened again. The next fish Mother Bear ate herself. Littlest Bear, looking down from the tree, saw it all. How she did want to taste of one of those fish! But Mother Bear never even glanced up at her. She acted just as if there was no such person in all the Great World as Littlest Bear. The fishing was good. Hardly would one fish have disappeared when there would be another for Brother and Sister to pretend to quarrel over. They were big, plump fish, and Littlest Bear's mouth watered more and more as she watched Brother and Sister enjoying them. It seemed to her as if it was more than she could endure. But she had to endure it. There was nothing else to do. She tried not to watch them, but it was of no use.

Finally, Mother Bear caught a little fish. It was much the smallest of all the fish she had caught. She carried it over to the foot of the tree and dropped it there.

"You may come down now," she growled. "This fish is for you."

Littlest Bear was still sulky. She wanted to say that she wouldn't come down, but she didn't dare to. Very slowly she climbed down.

"I won't touch that fish! I won't touch it!" she kept saying over and over to herself as she climbed down.

"You may come down now," she growled, "this fish is for you!"

But when she reached the ground that little fish was right under her nose. She couldn't help but smell of it. She was still saying to herself that she wouldn't touch it. But in spite of this, she did touch it with her nose. Appetite was too much for her. She made just one bite of that little fish. It didn't satisfy her in the least. It merely made her hungrier than ever for more.

But there were no more. Mother Bear was through fishing. "I hope this will be a lesson to you," said she to Littlest Bear, "and that next time you will be obedient." Then she told the little Bears to follow her, and led the way off through the Green Forest.
