

Bernhardt's Bed Draws Hundreds of U. S. Tourists

Hundreds Visit Exposition of Actress' Belongings Being Held Prior to Public Sale.

By International News Service.
Paris, June 7.—The late Sarah Bernhardt's great gold mahogany bed with its regal canopy is drawing hundreds of American tourists to the exposition of the artist's belongings which is being held prior to their public sale at the Gorges Petit Gallery, June 11, 12 and 13. The proceeds will be used to pay off debts against the estate.

"Divine Sarah's" stage jewelry makes a glittering display. Included are the decorations worn on her uniform as "Aiglon," the brilliant head ornament worn in the role of "Cleopatra" as well as many rings and necklaces Madame Bernhardt always identified with the parts she played.

Curiously enough, there is not a single genuine precious stone in the lot. Close friends of the actress explained that she was forced to sell her valuable jewelry during the last few years to pay her actual living expenses.

Three pieces of sculpture by Bernhardt will be sold under the hammer. One is a masque in marble of Sarah's husband, Jacques Balama. Another is a marble of her sister, Regina Bernhardt. The third statue also in marble, is a group of three figures entitled "After the Tempest."

Madame Bernhardt was passionately fond of collecting Venetian glass and this collection from an artistic standpoint, is probably the most valuable of the lot.

Homes of Comfort

The Secret of Your Success Lies in Owning Your Own Home

This beautiful and cozy bungalow is 24x26 feet exclusive of sun room. It can be built easily on a 40-foot lot. This bungalow is pleasingly different—a distinctive home wherever placed. A 27-inch water table extends around the house, with stucco above up to the belt course, and shingles in the gables. In the interior you will find features which are possessed usually in only the more expensive homes. The living room is exceedingly large, light and open. It has a beamed ceiling and a fireplace. On either side of the fireplace are French doors leading into the sun room, flooded with light. A wide arch leads to the dining room. Chambers are shut off by doors from the rest of the interior. This bungalow is amply insulated in all outside wall and ceiling.

Complete working drawings for this home can be procured from Grove-Hibbard company, 524 Sunderland building, Omaha.

Learned Hermit Dwells in Heart of Kansas City

Brilliant Young Student in German University Decides To "Get Away From It All" When Jilted By Girl.

Kansas City, Mo., June 9.—In the heart of Kansas City lives a hermit. His hair and beard are long and gray and matted; his clothing is tattered as ever was that of a monk of the middle ages; in the summer time he goes barefooted as a friar; he absentmindedly takes no interest in the things of the world, and for 15 years he has lived alone in a cave situated in the pit of a deserted rock quarry.

His name is John Herman; he is 75 and the only human being to whom he ever speaks is the corner groceryman from whom he buys his meager food supply, which he cooks for himself in his dugout.

Formerly Herman earned a living by hammering stones for the quarry owner, but lately he has been in poor health and lives off a pittance of $10 a month allowed him by the county. But he does not want the pittance increased, he does not want charity. He merely wishes to be let alone. In the last 10 years he has never read a newspaper; he has never listened to a phonograph or talked over a telephone or ridden in an automobile, and he doesn't care to do any of those things. He says he is contented with his life as a recluse. His interest in life is solely in the stars. He is an educated man and an astronomer.

Unrequited Love.
The old, old story of being jilted by a girl made Herman a hermit. Fifty years ago Herman was a brilliant young student of astronomy in a German university. He met the girl of his dreams. They walked at night through the streets of the quaint university town, and the girl began to advise Herman for his liking. One night they stood by the side of the canal, and Herman told his sweetheart that the water was as clear as her eyes. He explained the constellations that spanned the sky overhead, and the girl promised to marry him.

But Herman had a rival. Perhaps the rival's hair was more curly than Herman's—perhaps his wit was sharper—perhaps there was no reason why the girl jilted Herman and married his rival.

Herman was heartbroken and left his native Germany. He came to this country hoping to forget his lost love. He worked at different tasks and for a time was employed as instructor of German in various schools. But he could not forget her—the girl he loved. Other women held no interest for him, and association with humanity in general jarred on him. He decided to get away from it all and live alone with only the memories of his romantic past.

Builds a Dugout.
Fifteen years ago he built a dugout in the quarry, and during those 15 years he has talked intimately with no one. He occasionally sends to Germany for books on astronomy, but otherwise he has no intellectual communication with the world outside the quarry.

Herman has become a tradition in the neighborhood. He is known as the "Old Man of the Quarry." On account of the fantastic and rather fearsome appearance which he

Home Shortage Keeps Home Demands Active

Owing to the continued shortage of homes and the scarcity of houses for rent, the demand for reasonably priced homes continues active, as reported by George Schroeder of the Schroeder Investment company.

There are also many inquiries for duplexes, flats, store buildings or other investment properties and same finds ready market when priced right.

The Schroeder Investment closed 15 deals amounting to $80,400 for the month of May and has several more deals pending.

Ninety-Nine Year Lease on Property Near Tech

The George F. Jones company last week leased for 99 years the property at the southwest corner of Thirty-third and Cumins streets, on a valuation of $12,000. The lease was made through the C. B. Stutz company.

This property was purchased in 1907 by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rogers, the present owners, for only $2,900. It has a frontage of 40 feet on Thirty-third street and 65 feet on Cumins street.

The Rogers house will be moved off and four stores will be erected on the lot, according to George Jones. Plans are now being drawn for the stores.

The Jones company is also building six new stores at the southwest corner of Twenty-fourth and Fort streets, and three double brick houses on Fifteenth street just south of Dodge.

Comenius Pupils Give Health Pageant

—and your name goes in the coffee pot, too.

At these words the little second grade boy looked quizzically up at his prosecutor, a big clown man. So this was the way the world honored great achievements, was it. Had he not by three whole weeks of steady campaigning at last argued his mother-into pouring a little coffee into his usual glass of milk at breakfast? He had—a great, though diluted, victory indeed.

But here was this clown man eclipsing this triumph by putting his name along with those of several fellow heroes into the coffee pot as though drinking coffee were a legal offense.

No, this is not a section of a revised edition of "Alice in Wonderland." It is only one of the many ways Cho-Cho, the health clown, who toured the public school recently, had of getting the little tots to practice in their daily lives the truths he taught him concerning healthful living.

The little second grade boy saw how his schoolmates took pride in having their names placed in the milk bottle. And the next time Cho-Cho visited his school his name was transferred from the coffee pot to the milk bottle.

Lessons Accepted.

The health pageant presented by the pupils of Comenius school at the class day exercises Friday illustrates the serious and practical manner in which the school children have accepted the simple lessons in personal hygiene.

Five acts comprised the pageant, which expounds the reformation of a school boy who could see no use in keeping the daily health chart. He falls asleep and the Goddess of Health reminds him in a dream that he must obey the health laws or serious consequences will result. The boy, however, refuses to give heed, and soon finds himself in the valley of illness, where dwell the germs, influenza, toothache, pneumonia, tuberculosis, Neglect and others, who finally overcome him. Then he sees other children enter the valley, but they are protected by the Goddess of Health and her band, among them Temperance, Correct Posture, Cleanliness and Fresh Air, who beat off the attacking germs. The lad is hailed into the court of the world, is found guilty and sentenced to a life of suffering. At this point the youth awakes, and changing his mind, is ever afterward a strict observer of the health laws.

Nineteen Get Diplomas.

The pageant was produced under the direction of Lulu M. Hickey, the class academic teacher.

The class address was delivered by J. L. McGorry, assistant superintendent of schools, and vocal selections were given by Dorothy Steinbaugh.

Diplomas were presented to the 19 graduates. Officers of the class were Claud Jelen, president; Reynold Tomes, secretary, and Alex Swoboda, treasurer.

Delegates to Building Meet to Leave This Week
